THE STORY OF A SNAKE.

The following incident, which happened to the writer long years ago, is of such a thrilling nature as to cause the blood to run cold in one's veins at the bare mention of The account is founded on facts, and can be vouched for by witnesses of undoubted integrity :

While sanutering out one morn through an orange grove bordering on or of the bayous of Louisiana, and where the warning hiss and rattle of that most venomous and deadly species of the reptile tribe are not unfrequently heard, I came upon an inviting shady nook, and being weary and fatigued by excess and the heat of the sun, I sought repose by stretching myself at length upon the grass, and while lying there, dreaming day dreams and being re freshed by gentle breezes, deep seemed with the funes of the luseious Louisiana orange, I naturally yielded to the seductive influence of Morpheus, into whose arms I gracefully resigned myself.

I did not lie long thus, however, before I was awakened by the sense of a cold pressure about my neck. I glanced downward to ascertain the cause of my disturbance, when, oh, horror I what met my gaze but a huge rattlesuake, lying with his head resting as complacently and as serenely as one can imagine, upon the back of my head, which I had carelessly thrown across my breast; the rest of his body being drawn over my shoulder and wound around my neck. His piercing black eyes "looked daggers" into mine, and the diabolical expression of his countenance generally looked, if it did not say, in as many words "The game is up with you, now, my,l which to me was painfully too apparent just then to entertain the least hope escape. Fortunately, I displayed great presence of mind, and I knew that to stir or to make an audible noise was instant

I thought that while there was life there work, I began devising schemes by which I HOUSE-FURNISHING GOODS GENERALLY might make a soup decire on his snakeship and effect an escape from any impending doom. Ah! the thought strue. me, I has a sharp penknife in my pocket! ould I but slyly ease my hand down into my p. citet, get possession of the knife, and by a rapid movement sever the head from the body, I would be free! But no; the knife was in my right hand pocket, and I dared not move that hand from under his head to get it. Then could I not clutch him by the neck and body and hold him? That wo ald not do either, for were I to choke him he . ould choke me. There was but one resource left me, and that was to lie erfectly quiet and let events develop them . 'ves ; perhaps some one would chance to pass this way and frighten the mouster away. I remained wrant thus within the serpent's embrace a wal ages, when I lew moments, which seemeheard the rustling of grass as of approacuing footsteps. A gleam of hope now entered my mind. Perhaps it was some one sent by Providence to rescue me from my perilous situation. time also, as my anticipated rescuer was passed by within a few paces of where I ay, unaware of and unconcerned as to the leut prayer. I prayed that he would come nearerme, in nopes that he presence would a grant of recognition and went his way.

The noise caused the snake to move and draw himself tighter about my neck. I shuddered from fear, or hope, I know not which.

I had by this time grown very weak; my blood seemed to be getting as cold as that of the snake itself, and I lay there perfectly powerless, and, as it were, dying by inches -staring grins death in the face, while his icy hand encircled my throat. My physical strength could endure no more, and I swooned away from sheer fright and exhaustion. The supreme moment had now arrived. In reviving from my fainting spell I suppose I britated the snake in some way, as he had loosened himself from my neck, and coiling himself upon my breast, forth, stood ready for the attack. I uttered a yell at which he sprang at my face with terrific force, and as I felt his jaws close on me, and his poisonous sting enter my flesh, I awoke from my horrible dream, in a state of cold prespiration, amid the merriment and laughter of several of my lady acquaintance, one of whom had been tickling my neck with a straw.

A GOOD STORY. -A boatman on the Mis-A poor chap was going down the river in a dug out, and had been informed of a certain locality called Rick's Bend which was eighteen miles around, and in one place about a hundred yards across. He was advised to land at the narrow point and drag his craft over, but he passed the spot going down without observing it, and paddling on eighteen miles around, he struck it on the other side. Landing at once, he dragged his boat across, and went gliding Loretto Marble Works. along down with a light heat, till he cam along within a few paces of the spot where he dragged across before. Thinking it was a new cut off, he went ashore and tugged his boat over again. When he got back to the river a second time he sauntered around a little to stretch himself, and soon discovered an old newspaper, out of which he had taken his breakfast that morning. It was now about sundown, and as he had paddled thirty-six miles without any flattering progress, he scuttled his dug, out with a hatchet, built a camp and waited till next day for a steamboat.

A PATENT RAT-TRAP. -The local editor of the Burlington (Iowa) Huwkeye says a man has invented a patent rat-trap that does not require any bait, and will fetch a -and the trap is placed at the entrance of the rat hole. When it is wound up the suction begins, the rat comes. He may hold on to the ground with his teeth, and hump his back and paw dirt, and weep and yell for the police all he wants, he comes out of that hole backward, is dragged into a back compartment, where a steel glove drags his hide off and lays it aside for a kid glove manufacturer, while the carcass is pushed into a little furnace and incremated.

SCIENTIFIC.

SOUTH AFRICA DIMONDS .- Hon Theohillus Shepstone has pointed out that Africa, south of the equator, consists of a great central, irregularly shaped basin, the outer edge of which varies in height from 4,000 to 10,000 feet above the level of sea, and that through this rim the Orange River to the southwest, and the Limpopo River to the northeast, cut their way. It is near the exit of the former, from the enormous basin, that the diamond fields lie, while gold in large quantities is being obtained from the northeastern district. The author of paper conjectures that this basin is the dry hed of an enarmous inland sea, and that the diamonds which are found in it are formed by carbonic acid gas, ejected by the action of subterranean heat through fissures possible. in the carth's surface, into the bed of the dried up sea, the water of which was sufficiently deep to imprison and liquefy the gas after its evolution. The discovery of the process by which this liquid gas became erystallized, whether by electric or magnetic current, or by the potent influences of iron in some of its numerous forms, must be left to future scientific investigations.

Dr. Robert Mann, late Superintendent of Education in the Colony of Matal, states that, since the serious working of the dismond fields in 1871, large numbers of diamonds had been obtained, and it was estimuted that in 1872 there were no less than 20,000 miners searching for them. So large had been the yield that a very material diminution had been brought about in the value of the larger gems in the home market, and the diggers are now leaving the diamond fields for the more profesible northeastern gold fields. The result of the discovery of these fields han been to develop South African commercial enterprize, and to civilize the wild tribes in that part of the Geis, Foster & Quinn's,

Mr. Sopen, a diamond merchant, states that the number of dimmends of the purest water received from the Cape was very small, not amounting, on the whole, to more than two or three per cont., while of ten carat stones not one in 10,000 was perfeet. In consequence of the large quantity of second class stones received from the Cape, such gens were now siz'y or seventy per cent, changer than they were three years ago. Stones which some time since would have reclized $7,500 would now only fetch $1,000. The first class diamonds, however, were rather dear r than formerly.

THE CHENICAL CLASSIFICATION OF IRON.

M. Fremy, an eminent French chemist who has recently been studying further into the metallargy of iron and steel, thinks that it would be of much more advantage to founders and metallurgists if commercial iron, which is still classed according to its At PRICES Below nical properties, should be known with reference to its chemical characteristics, small quantities of carbon, sulphur, phosphorus, etc., which it pay contain, and which chemical analysis would re real.
