THE CAMBRIA FREEMAN.

Ebensburg, Pa.,

SEPT. . . . SEPT. 11, 1874.

W. L. FOULK,

of the Western Pennsylvania Bar, also in the West Virginia Supreme Court.

Is empowered to receive subscriptions for the following publications, viz: the Cambria FREEMAN, and all the Eastern papers.

Death of Rev. J. W. Edie.

It affords us sincere sorrow that we announce the death of Rev. J. W. Edie, which occurred at this place, on Thursday morning last, at 4 o'clock. Mr. Edie came to Ebensburg in the Year of Grace 1873, and since taking charge of the Presbyterian congregation here he labored diligently for the spiritual welfare of the people committed to his care, and we are pained to say with success indeed, as the number of communicants attached to his church will testify. He was a man of many excellent traits of character, and since his death we have heard many speak in the highest terms of his Christian virtues. He was a man of peace, and one who was ever ready to do good to his fellow-men. He was a kind husband and father, and his family will long miss the kind counsel and affection of a devoted husband and father. He was a man of fine literary attainments, and was a ready writer, and a forcible speaker. He was a man of deep piety, and was ever ready to give a reason for the hope that was within him. He was a man of prayer, and his prayers were always fervent and effectual. He was a man of God, and his life was a living epistle, known and read of all men. He was a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. He was a man of affliction, and was tried in the furnace of affliction. He was a man of patience, and bore his afflictions with Christian fortitude. He was a man of faith, and his faith was strong in the hour of trial. He was a man of hope, and his hope was bright in the hour of death. He was a man of prayer, and his prayers were heard and answered