-This from the Johnstown Tribune of the 19th: "There is a joke going the rounds at Harrisburg just now, and it is all at the expense of Hon. John Buck, of Carrolltown. When the members of the Legislature were drawing their allowance of postage stamps Mr. Buck stepped up in his turn, and presented his order. The Clerk asked him the usual question: 'What denomination?' Our egislature facetiously replied that he was a Lutheran and the distributor of stamps was necessitated to tell him that he wished to know which it was, one, two, or three-cent stamps he wanted." It may be an extreme-ly good joke, but the truth of history compels us to state that it was a member from York county, a Lutheran by profession, who made the remark attributed to Mr. Buck. The latter gentleman is a member of another nomination. But it is just like the Tribune to not stick to the precise text when a point is to be made on a political opponent. -Somewhere about Christmas, bearing date Dec. 23, 1874, on Mr. Lloyd, of the firm of Myers & Lloyd, and purporting not the villain managed to escape from to be signed by Noah Dishong, was presented at the store of that firm. Subsequently an order on the same firm for $22 worth of store goods, payable to Henry Warner and signed by John Wilkinson, was also presented and paid. After scrutiny revealed the fact that these orders were both conched in the same style of penmanship, buyers who call where the goods are first and investigation revealed the fact that both ass and cash prices are low, and the best were forgerles. > AN INTERESTING LAW SUIT. - The case of the Commonwealth against Miss Agnes Wilson, on the charge of larcony, tried before Judge Dean at our court last week, was one of the most interesting cases tried for some time. The prosecutor was Mr. James Walls. a gentleman bordering on his three score and ten, and with considerable of this world's goods, while the defendant was a lady not yet thirty. She was accused of purloining a silk dress and bonnet valued at about $100. The history of the case is substantially as follows, as revealed during the trial. In October last Miss Wilson went to live with Walls, who is her uncle by marriage, and it appears that during her solourn he took a fancy to her, and intimated that he desired her to become his wife. She persistently refused all offers, saying at one time: "Mr. Walls, you can keep all your money; I can't go it." In the meantime, Mr. Walls had sent to the city and purchased the dress and homnet. The dress he had sent to a mantus, maker's in Petersburg to have made up, for Miss Wilson. At the drassmaker's house. The history of the case is substantially as Miss Wilson. At the drasmaker's house Walls and Miss Wilson went one day, and while there, according to her testimony, she inferred that Mr. Walls gave Miss Wilson the dress. Mr. Walls' counsel argued that the dress had only been loaned to her. Subsequently, Mr. Walls learned that Agnes was receiving attentions from a gentleman in Altoona, which so exasperated him that he took the dress from the dressmaker's, and locked it up at home. Some time after, Miss Wilson called at his residence, and upon the promise of her accompanying him to church she obtained possession of the dress. She did accompany him as far as Petersburg, when she made an excuse that she had a letter to put in the post office. From that time she has had the dress in her pessession, and by the verdict of the jury, which was for her acquittal, she still has the dress, and Mr. Walls has no doubt been taught the foliv of suing in such cases. P. M. Lytle, Esq., attorney for the defendant, whose reputation as a criminal lawyer is famous, made some thrusts at the plaintiff, which if not appropriate, were extremely original and facetious, causing continual uproars from the audience W. H. Woods, Esq., argued for the plaintiff in an earnest and forcible manner, Judge Dean rendered an impartial charge, informing the jury that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of any reasonable doubt as to

> tingdon Local News. THE EXECUTION OF SAMUEL BEIGHLEY. Jr. - On Wednesday afternoon last, at eight minutes past one o'clock precisely, Samuel Beighley, a young man only about twenty years of age, paid the extreme penalty of the law in the corridor of the jail at Greensburg for the brutal murder, on the 30th of November last, of an old man named Joseph Kerr, a resident of Franklin township, Westmereland county, and a sheemaker by trade, for whom he laid in wait in a building separate from the family residence, in which the murdered man worked and fre quently slept, and after striking him on the head with a billet of wood, cut his throat from ear to ear with a shoe-knife. The murderer had to be literally carried to the gal-lows, the well sustained fortitude which served him so well throughout his trial and subsequent incarceration having failed him in the last terrible extremity. He was attended by Revs. Love and Moorehead as spiritual advisers, the former of whom read from the scaffold a long statement which had been prepared by the condemned man, and which set forth the full particulars of the crime for which he was about to be execu-Beighley is also said to have confessed to the murder of Lizzie Mess, near Saitsburg, Indiana county, several months ago, but whether he did or did not acknowledge that crime in his dying statement it does not seem possible to understand from the report of the execution in the Johnstown Tribune, which first denies and then affirms that his confession included an acknowledgment of that offense. Be that as it may, it is very generally believed that young Beighley was the murderer of poor Lizzie Mess, and that while paying the penalty of one murder he was in reality expiating for the commission of at least two horrible doeds of blood. After the reading of the statement, Sheriff Guffey asked the doomed man if he had anything further to say, and on receiving a reply in the negative, the black cap was adjusted, the signal given, the trap sprung, and Samuel Beighley was launched into eternity. After hanging twenty-five minutes the attending physicians announced that life was extinct, whereupon his body was cut down and delivered to his friends

DESTITUTION IN MINNESOTA.-Below we present a circular setting forth the fear-ful degree of destitution to which the people of Rock county, Minn., have been reduced, and soliciting aid from the charitable of more favored localities. This is a direct appeal to the people of this locality, and the condition of things which calls it forth being one of peculiar hardship, inasmuch as innesota has twice been devastated by the same plague, we trust the appeal, which speaks for itself, will not fall on unresponsive ears. Here is the appeal with accompanying letter :

LUVERNE, Rock Co., Ming., Jan. 11, 1875. P. M., Ebensburg, Pa.—Dear Sir; We enclose an appeal which we make in behalf of our destitute citizens, with a request that you hand one of the circulars to your editor for publication, and have a committee appointed to solicit contributions and forward to the undersigned, who have been appointed to accommittee the contributions and forward to the undersigned,

MINNESOTA. MINNESOTA.

The great destitution prevailing in this county, on account of the destruction of crops by grasshoppers, compels us to appeal to those who are more fortunate for heip for the suffering among us. This county, situated in the south-western corner of the State, is on the frontier. Prior to 1872 it was chiefly a wilderness. Its settlers now, numbering more than 700 families, are mostly homesteaders. Their all was expended in reaching their new homes, providing some kind of habitation, breaking a few acres of prairie, and making a start. They providing some kind of habitation, breaking a few acres of prairie, and making a start. They have no resources except in the produce of their farms. When their crops fail all is gone—nothing is left but starvation if help from abroad cannot be obtained. A large portion of the crop of 1873 was destroyed by grasshoppers, but enough was left to enable the settlers, by mortgaging their teams and the expected crop, to reach the harvest of 1874. But just as the first ripe grain began to fall before the reaper, their fields were again visited by the pests against which no foresight could provide and whose ravages no industry could repair. The grasshoppers came in clouds, and the results of a year's hard toil, the sole dependence for living for hundreds of families, were consumed as by fire. The destruction of corn, oats and as by fire. The destruction of corn, oats and vegetables was complete, and less than one-third of the crop of wheat was saved; and this must be sold at the low price of 50 cents per bushel to satisfy the mortgages given to carry them over last year, although it represents the last loaf of bread and the last bushel of seed of many a family. And now we find ourselves in a condition that is really appalling. More than one-half the families in the county need than one-half the families in the county need assistance. The wants of many are urgent and immediate. The cold winter is upon them; their clothing and bedding is scant and worn out; they have no fut but the wild hay of the prairie; they are in want of food; they are in want of all those things that in older commu-nities are called the necessities of life; they are remote from railway communication, and bence but a meager portion of the generous contributions that have already been made has reached them—a portion wholly inadequate to their wants. They cannot borrow of their neighbors, for they are aundreds of miles from the region of abundant barvests. They cannot go elsewhere, for they have no means wherewith to go—they have nowhere else to go, for this is their home. Although they are in distress, they are not discouraged. They believe that this scourge is only temporary; another man of the Rock County Resief Committee, LuVerne, Minn., via Worthington. RETROSPECT OF THE TEACHERS INSTI-

[CONCLUDED.] John McCormick gave an exposition of Barrett's Inductive Grammar. This work, unlike most grammars in use, is not cumbered with unnecessary and ambiguous definitions, which give beginners a disgust for study. The plan of this work is mathematical, or algebraical. The author gives a Table of Relations, and every word in the language must tally with some word in the table. Then to find what part of speech any word is, you equate it with a word in the table in the same manner as you determine that a pound of avoirdupols is a pound by equating it with a round weight. For in-stance, take the sentence, "The snow is white." You first analyze the sentence, then give each word its relation. The relation of "the" is "the snow;" of "snow," "snow is; of "is," "snow is;" of "white, "white snow." Then, "THE snow"—"cold day"—the first relation—therefore "the (an adjective) snow is "—"MAN walks" her guilt, and the jury returned the next morning with a verdict of not guilty-Hun-- second relation - therefore "snow," a noun nominative to "is:" "snow is" - "John is," -ninth relation, - therefore, "is (a verb intransitive) WHITE snow" - "COLD day" - "white" an adjective. By this arrangement the student is enabled to determine to what part of speech

"OBAL TEACHING" received the attention of Mr. Patterson, wh stated that scholars were inught by means of oral instruction when books were few, and he for one favored its adoption in our schools. Some discussion followed Mr. P.'s remarks, but unavoidable circumstances prevented me from hearing it. I think, however, that Mr. P. is on the right track. It is a fact patent to all close observers that instruction given orally makes a greater impression on the mind of the pupil than rules committed in than rules committed to memory from a text book. Then, again, to give oral instruction presupposes a thorough knowledge of the sub-jects treated on the part of the teachers. This would have a tendency to elevate the profession of teaching by inducing those intending to engage in this vocation to prepare them to engage in this vocation to prepare them-selves to meet the extra demands of capability to instruct orally. Mr. P. evidently did not mean, nor does the writer of this mean, that oral teaching should be made a specialty; only that it be made use of to a greater extent than it has been heretofore.

A sad and fatal accident occurred on Wednesday last, about one mile west of Lilly's station, whereby a young man named Wm. Kennedy, of Bolivar, employed as a brakeman on the Ps. R. R., was so terribly crushed by being caught between the bumpers of two cars, that he expired almost immediately.

Notwithstanding financial affairs are sadly out of joint, matrimony still has its faithful votaries, among the more recent of whom I may mention Mr. James Singer and Miss Cordelia Biter, both of Munster township, who were united in the holy bonds at the Catholic church, Loretto, on Tuesday of last week. If the newly wedded experience one-half the jovs I wish them, and which I am sure they deserve, their journey through life will indeed be a pleasant one, and many little Bingers will rise up to procinim their praise in tones of sweetest symphony.

His disease was inflammation of the brain, with which he was afflicted for a period of only twelve days preceding his death, during which time he suffered great pain, but bore it patiently. Some three months before his death the deceased took to himself a young and loving wife, who is now left to mourn her sad and untimely bereavement, bereft as she has been of a devoted husband who was greatly esteemed by his accountances and of was greatly esteemed by his acquaintances and of whom it may truly be said he died without an enemy in the world. Intelligent and sociable, he won the hearts of all, and whether as a fond husband or true friend, his impulses were always kind, generous and affectionate. With a crushing weight indeed has his sudden and unlooked for death fallen upon the doting heart of her who so recently rowed before God's holy altar that she would leve honor and obey, but who now, alas! is forced to exclaim in the bitterness of her woe:

"O, Death! thou dread destroyer, Thou has winged thy fatal dart;
In the morning of his manhood
It has pierced his gentle heart.
Like a flower plucked in Spring time,
Thou hast nipped him in his bloom,
And hast left his wife here weeping
O'er his dark and atlent tomb."

O'er his dark and silent tomb

Gone but not forgotten. May be rest in peace eternal is the earnes; prayer of

Ayer's Prairie Lands Hair Vigor, For restoring Gray Hair to and the same

is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glass and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thicks ened, falling hair checked, and builds ness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fooling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable Containing neither oil nor dve, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the bair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.
