Occurrence at Cohoes-The Fading Shadow and Ending Life - A Cohoes (N. Y.) corstreet which at first we could not believe, spect.

Mrs. Julien Jerome, a French woman, whom all that knew her say had always led a very devout, good life, lived on Main street, and was taken sick about five week ago,-Immediately after a cross appeared on the wall beside her bed, which, all efforts cans not obliterate. It first appeared very small and faint, and scarcely observable, but by degrees it began to grow large and appear plainer. Such was the story, and yesterday morning our correspondent visited the bouse of the sick woman to ascertain the truth of the story. There is no denying it was the cross on the wall, plain and observable to all. The wall is not papered, but is whitewashed, and when the cross first appeared some member of the family took knife and attempted to scratch it out of the sall, but to no avail. The whitew sh was daubed over it with the same result. The woman died last evening, and your correspondent visited the house again. He ound the mysterious cross was fading as

A Boy HERO .- Risking and Loving his Life .- We have briefly noticed the death of two crackers boys in the coal mines near Scianton. Later accounts of the accident say that the conduct of one of these boysesorted the highest degree of heroism.

One of the begrimed little toilers, an Irish lad named Henry Weish, was standing on a step above one of the screens, and desiring to pass to the opposite side set his foot on the screen which was revolving slowly, intending to step off at a convenient distance, but unfortunately his foot caught in the screen, and when he endeavored to step off he was held fast. Knowing his fate he cried out to his comrades. His cries brought to his assistance a Welsh lad bout thirteen years of age named John Owens. The little hero, never thinking of his own life, rushed forward to pluck his companion from the jaws of death. He did not realize the danger in the excitement of the moment, did not hesitate to realize it, but when he saw the other lad's terror pictured in his face he ran to his help, and in an unthinking moment set his foot on the fatal screen and songlet to pull his companion from his perilous position. It was in vain, he was held too fast, and before Owens could release himself it was too late, The massive machine went round, taking both boys with it and crushing both their lives out against the wood work beneath its cruel weight.

the quartet of Hahn babies, on Low street, died of catarrh, and two of the others, Sarah and Mary, are said to be sick. The dead baby was yesterday prepared for burial and laid in the front room. The three little sisters, who are now three weeks old, lay in the crib in the adjoining room, Sarah and Katie together at the head, and Mary, with Jennie's vacant pillow beside her, occupying the other end. Sarah, the one that was delicate from birth, has not thrived, but Jennie seemed to be growing finely until taken sick. Her funeral will take place to-day. Mrs. Hahn, the mother, is well enough to go about the house. She is a comely-faced woman of average stature. Although but thirty years of age, Mrs. Hahn has been the mother of ten children, the first being twins, born when she was seventeen years
