The morning train form the West, on the Paltimore and Ohio Railroad, stops at the Relay House daily for breakfast. Among the passengers on this train recently was a bridal party, the principals of which had attracted not a little attention by their billing and cooing. After refreshing themselves at the breakfast table, the bride and groom went out on the depot platform and looked around. The bride was suddenly seized with a desire to ride to Bultimore on the locomotive; the newly-made husband endeaved by argument to deter her from such a rash proceeding, but he failed most utterly. The newly-made wife, as in most contests where language is power, came off victorions, she having, by her superior volubility. succeeded in convincing her husband that it was extremely right and exceedingly proper for a wife to have her own way, and ride on a dozen engines if she desired to do so. The lady was placed in the engine cub, but as there was no room for the husband, he was compelled to take a seat in one of the cars, where he remained during the remainder of the journey in no very enviable state of mind. The result of the "chin music" that had passed between himself and wife made him unhappy, and he considered it very ominous; so much so, indeed, that all his dreams of connubial felicity were transformed and he felt in his heart of hearts that in all similar contests during life the superiority of his wife's tongue would carry her to the front with flying colors. While the unhappy husband was meditating on the remarkable change matrimony makes in feminine humanity, the wife was scated in the cab, half blind with flying cinders, covered with ashes and soot, and altogether a more miserable specimen than the newly-married weman who had a few moments before been fortunate enough to tame her husband could not be found. The rattling and jolting of the engine, as it dashed along at the rate of forty miles an hour, shook up the lady so effectually, that before the train reached Mount Chare, she became very sick, and the enginear was compelled to carry her into the tender. When the train dashed into Camden Station, the husband jumped off and ran to the locomotive, where he found his wilful wife seated recklessly on a lump of coal in the tender. Her eyes were filled with small pieces of cinders, her clothes were begrimed with smake and soot, and she was very sick. The meeting between the husband and wife is said to have been very affectionate, and a carriage having been procured, she was lifted down and out of the tender. The train hands seemed to enjoy the lady's unhappy condition very much, and evidently considered the whole thing a huge jeke. The lady was taken to the Eutaw House, and, judging from her open engine for mean that to come.

A MOMENT OF AGGNY,

It is seldom that we are called upon to chronicle a more during fout, or one deserv. Mast ing of greater communication, than the fol-

A short time ago, in the bottom of the new shaft of the Woodville mine, three men had just prepared a three-fuse blast, had lighted the fuse, jumped into the bucket and started for the surface, when, through the carelosmess of the engineer, the engine caught on the center and refused to move. Here the three mealigny, within six feet of the blast, for some little time; but it seemed like hours to them. At last one of the party, Benjamin Kendall by name, realizing that something must be wrong on top, jumped from the bucket and proceeded to extinguish the slowly burning fuse. Two pieces were put out without difficulty, but the third he found it impossible to reach, as it had already burned in the drill hole, Then he turned to climb back to the bucket, but it was too late; his companions were then being holded to the surface. Who can imagine the mental ageny endored by that men when he saw that he had been left to his fate, and was liablent any moment to be blown into eternity? With a desperate resolve, he started to climb up the timbers, but he had not gone more than five or six feet on his way when the blast exploded, throwing a shower of rocks and dirt far above his head. Fortunately Kendall was but little injured, receiving merely a few slight scratches on his hands. It was a very close call, and one that will long be remembered by him. The engineer was

HAPPY HUSBANDS.

It is a man's own fault if he is unhappy with his wife, in nine cases out of ten. It is a very exceptional woman who will not be all she can to an attentive husband, and a more exceptional one who will not be very disagreeable if she finds herself willfully ford street, Epensourg. neglected. It would be very easy to hate a man who, having bound a woman to him, made no effort to make her happy; hard not to love one who was constant and tender; and when a woman loves she always strives to please. The great men of this world have often been wretched in their domestic relations, while mean and common men have been exceedingly happy. The reason | Hotel. is very plain. Absorbed in themselves, those who desired the world'sapplause were careless of the little world at home; while those who had none of this egotism strove to keep the hearts that were their own, and were happy in their tenderness. No woman will love a man the better for being renowned or prominent. Though he be first among men, she will only be prouder, not fonder; and if she loses him through this renown, as is often the case, she will not even be proud. But give her leve, appreciation, kindness, and there is no sucrifice she would no, make for his content and comfort. The man who loves her well is her horo and

Farty-Five Dozen of Clothes Pins. HOW MRS. JOHNSON STIRRED UP THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY-A WARN-

ING TO LAZY HUSBANDS.

Ladies who have husbands who are neglectful in supplying them with kindlings should carefully study the experience of a Division street sister. All her married life she has had an IN PRICES TO CASH BUYERS on all goods in unbroken struggle with her husband to keep herself supplied with wood, and the greater part of the time she has been obliged to depend upon her own deftness with the axe, and ar y one who has seen a woman handle an axe knows what a dreadful thing it is. Two months ago she begged of him not to go away without leaving her some kindlings. He said he wouldn't. But he finally did. Then she hit upon a plan. She had four dozen clothes pins. She took one dozen of them for start. ing the fire, and found that they worked admirably. The next day she used another dozen, and so she continued until the four dozen were gone. Then she went to the store and purchased another four dozen-having them "put in the bill." When they were gone she repeated the errand. She said no more to him about kindlings. For ten years she had kept up the battle, and now she was tired and sick at heart. He could go his own way, and she would go hers-patiently, uncomplainingly-until the end would come.

On Monday he signified at the store that he would like to settle his account. The bill was made out and handed him. He glanced down the items. As he advanced along the column his face began to work. First his eyes slowly enlarged, then his mouth gradually opened, caused by the drooping of his lower jaw; and wrinkles formed on his forehead. One-third down the column he formed his lips as if to whistle. Four lines below he did whistle. Half way down he said:

"Gra-cious !" A little further on he said : "Thunder!"

he spoke again: "By the Jumping Jupiter!" Then he read on, smiting his thigh TIN, COPPER & SHEET-IRON WARE vigorously, and giving vent to various

DOES IT PAY?

There's a way to find out. Take an area ten miles square anywhere in the outbelt, and summon every man within area, who has been continuously enger in raising cotton for the last five years, all examine his condition in 1869, noting b assests and liabilities, and the condition his estates, and compare with his asset and liabilities to-day. The result of sal an investigation would bring conviction every mind that our people are getting poorer. Our labor system is wrong. N man is now master of his own land and not direct labor to its most advantages ends. Neither is the amount or quality's labor subject to this decision. It is time not stop he will go to the bottom. When sick man continues to grow worse, he will die unless he ceases to grow worst. B must take medicine. Cotton cannot be raised at present prices with our pressi system of labor. Let the grangers consist closely the labor question.

Does it pay to wise cotton in this country
