

HARD BOILED EGGS. "It will surely kill you if you eat that hard boiled egg. Dr. Blank says so."

But in the first place, about hard-boiled eggs. We have seen dyspeptics who suffered untold torments with almost every kind of food, and torments of which they did tell after some medicines given for relief.

Thus much for hard-boiled eggs.—Not half so bad as half-boiled ones, and ten times as easy to digest as raw eggs, even in egg-nog.

In the second place, about what "Dr. Blank said." We wish to caution the reader not to believe a title of the statements quoted in that way.

THE HAT OF THE SEASON.—The Chicago Inter-Ocean has a treatise on women's hats, in which it says: "You meet a remarkably modest and timid appearing young lady of to-day, and you notice that her hat has a meek and shrinking indentation in the crown."

SINGULAR MATHEMATICAL FACT.—Any number of figures you may wish to multiply by 5 will give the same result if divided by 2—a much quicker operation, but you must remember to annex a cipher to the answer, whenever there is no remainder, and when there is a remainder, whatever it may be, annex a 5 to the answer.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS. Bedbugs are said to be most readily destroyed by nux vomica, in the form of tincture, combined with liquor ammonia, which mixture is to be applied to the joints and cracks of the bedstead.

Why is cabbage rendered wholesome and nutritious by being boiled in two waters? Because, according to Dr. Paris, cabbage contains an essential oil, which is apt to produce bad effects, and he recommends that they should be boiled in successive waters till they are soft and digestible.

To prevent hard soap, prepared with soda, from crumbling, the bars may be dipped in a mixture of rosin soap, tallow and wax.

A little camphene dropped between the neck and stopper of a glass bottle will render the latter easily removed, jammed fast.

To make silk which has been washed appear like new, sponge on the surface with a weak solution of gum arabic or white glue, and iron on the wrong side.

If you get a fish bone in your throat and sticking fast, there, swallow a raw egg; it will be almost sure to come down a bone easily and certain.

As is sometimes by accident, common sublimate is swallowed, the white one or two eggs will neutralize the poison, and change the effect to that of a dose of calomel.

Kerosene and powdered lime, water, or wood ashes, will soon remove the least labor.

Spots can be taken out of marble with finely powdered pumice-stone, mixed with verjuice. Cover the spots with the stuff to remain for two hours, then rub clean, dry, and polish.

Soapstone hearths are first washed in pure water and then rubbed with powdered marble or soapstone, with a piece of the same stone.

Two ounces of common tobacco, boiled in a gallon of water is used by the Chatham street dealers for removing old clothes. The stuff is rubbed on with a stiff brush. The goods are nicely cleaned; and, strange to add, tobacco smell remains.

Unslacked lime is excellent for cleaning small steel articles such as jewelry, buckles and the like.

REJECTED SUITORS.—A writer in the Home Journal says: "A woman never quite forgets the man who has loved her. She may not have loved him; she may, indeed, have given the 'no' instead of the 'yes' he desired; but the remembrance that he has sired a 'yes' always softens her thoughts of him, and would make him were he reminded of it, a friend for life. There may be girls who make jest of discarded suitors, but they are generally very young, and the wailing of their hearts is something that did not break through much depth of tenderness. There are mercenary offers, too, that only awaken scorn and hate in the woman who really to have touched a man's heart is something not to be forgotten while she lives. Always she remembers his eyes looked into hers; how, perhaps, he touched her hand with his, and how her heart ached when she turned away without that she could not give him. She loved some one else. Some other man has the truth of her soul—she has and always will have—but she cannot forget the one who turned her away and went his way and came to him more. She is glad when she hears of his success; grieved when she hears that he has suffered; and when some day she hears that he has married the girl who has herself been married for years perhaps, she who, at all times, would never have married him, is glad then? I do not believe she is. herself. Glad? Oh, yes; and is his wife pretty and nice? And then she says to herself that 'he has quite forgotten her,' and 'that of course is best,' and cries a little."

Useful Information.—One thousand and laths will cover seventy yards of surface, and eleven pounds of nails will put them on.

A cord of stone, three bushels of lime, and a cubic yard of sand will make one hundred cubic feet of wall.

Eight bushels of good lime, six bushels of sand, and one bushel of water will make enough good mortar to plaster one hundred square yards.

One thousand shingles, laid in inches to the weather, will cover five hundred square feet of surface, and eleven pounds of single nails will fasten them on.

One-fifth more siding and flooring needed than the number of square feet of surface to be covered, because of lap in the siding and matching of the floor.

Five courses of brick will lay a foot in height on a chimney; six courses in a course will make a flue four inches wide and twelve inches long, and seven courses in a course will make a flue six inches wide and sixteen inches long.

CUSTARD CAKE.—One cup of sugar, one egg and one-third of a cup of butter; put together and beat to a cream, then add one cup of sweet milk, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, and two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar. Bake in jelly tins. Custard for filling (reserving one white if frosting is desired), one tablespoonful corn starch and one cup sugar. Flavor to taste.
