One of the finest brilliants in America, and one with a romantic history, is now for sale at a jewelry store in Salt Lake City. The stone is 1-32 of a carat lighter than the celebrated Tweed diamond, but its cutting is much better, and it is considered by experts to be more valuable. It weighs eight Tradesmen's and a half carats and is exactly half an inch in diameter. It was for many hundred years in the family of an East India Prince. This potentate presented it to the ex-Queen Christina of Spain, who presented it to her daughter, ex-Queen Isabella, on the occasion of her marriage. The latter was forced to sell it, with many other diamonds, and Henle Brothers, of New York, bought it at an auction of her diamonds, which was made in Loudon. From this firm it was purchased by a St. Louis gentleman with about $60,000 worth of other diamonds. He was soon after Octorer 6th to November 7th, 1875. offered $15,000 in gold for it by the Americus club of New York, but he refused to sell it. Subsequently it was stolen from from him while visiting at Saratoga springs by thieves, who employed what is known as the umbrella game. While all ghting from the ears and as he started back the pin was torn from his shirt bosom. The trick was so dexterously turned that the victim did not discover his loss for several hours. When, however, he found himself minus the wonderful brilliant, he promptly telegraphed to the daily papers of New York city, offering $5,-000 reward, and no questions asked.

After this the same gentleman went to Salt Lake City, and traded his diamond for mining property valued at tie-developed well, and the lucky speculator realized over $60,000 from his investment. The miner who received the valuable

Of course he lost. A New York diamond shark, looking out for bargains, made them an offer for the stone, but it was refused. Later, however, they telegraphed to New York their acceptance of his proposition. That telegram found the man of diamonds at Salt Lake city, who then called on Joslin & Park, of Salt Lake city, and offered the diamonds as collateral for a large sum of money, which was advanced, and the brilliant was was advanced, and the brilliant was A few weeks after the gentleman who had obtained the money as a loan on had obtained the money as a loan on to redeem the stone and take it, when Joslin & Park offered him $1,000 for his bargain, which was now been choked to death in attempting to swallow his food before he chewed it long enough. Food in the stomach, surrounded with its juices, is like pieces of ice in a glass of water; for as the ice melts from without inwards, so the stomach juices dissolve the bits of food from without inward; and, as the smaller the pieces of ice, the sooner they are melted so the smaller the bits of food, the sooner they are dissolved, and pass out of the stomach, to be distributed to the system, giving it life and warmth and vigor. But if the pieces of food are large, they begin to rot before they are melted, causing heaviness, belching, nausea, or other discomforts. These make bad blood, contaminating the breath, sending dullness to the head, depression to the spirits, and a universal feeling of unwellness, lasting sometimes for half a day or a whole night. Therefore, eat slowly, with deliberation; talk a great slowly, with deliberation; talk a great deal at meals; cultivate cheerful conversation, and let any man or woman be considered a domestic enemy and pest who says or does anything at the table calculated to cause a single unpleasant sensation in any one present.

Ir a young girl or her big brother comes along and points a pistol at you RXECUTOR'S NOTICE. and tells you to walk down to the minister's or squire's and be married, go right along and do it; the marriage will be bogus. That has recently been decided by the Supreme Court of New York, and it is a great relief to lots of uncomfortable young fellows.

A MACADAMIZED ROAD COVERED BY TREES ONE BUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OLD.

Several years ago considerable excitement was created in Fairmonnt, W. Va., by the discovery of traces of an old macadamized road extending along the right bank of the Monongahela, opposite that place. Recently the government engineering party engaged in the surveying of the Upper Monongahela river, with the view of stackwatering that stream from Morgantown to Fairmount, examined this old road, and from the members of the party we learn that there can be no doubt but that this road furnishes another trace of the lost race that once dominated the continent before the Indians came into possession,

There are traces of the road for nearly eleven miles along the strip of bottom land between the hills and the river, after shifting its channel and ceting into the hills, has entirely obliterated every evidence of it. Generally the road is covered by from two to five feet of alluvium, either deposited through the course of ages by the river floods, or else by the slow washing off the bills skirting it. Its width is said to be

The most eurious feature about the road is that the stone from which it is formed appears invariably to have been burnt. Wherever the road shows itself in the cutting banks, it is marked by the black substratum of ashes. In depth the broken stone varies from six inches to eighteen inches of irregular fragments. The material employed appears to have been largely composed of boulders of red sandstone, and the conjecture is that they were broken after being made hot with water thrown upon them. There being few, if any, boulders in the river or adjacent country, the query arises, where could the material have been obtained to make this road?

At the crossings of the streams there are no traces of bridge abutments or piers, which leads to the conclusion that the streams were crossed on wooden bridges. At many points the road is covered with trees one hundred and fifty years old, which makes it certain that it was constructed long before the advent of the white man; and there are other circumstances surrounding the case which lead inevitably to the conclusion it was made in those early ages when a semi-civilized people inhabited North America. No one acquainted with the habits of the American Indians would give them credit for constructing such a work of art as this .-- Pittsburgh Commercial.

WAS IT DONALDSON'S BODY?-The Mil-

wankee Commercial Times gives the following particulars of the discovery of a floating corpse in the lake a few days since. The body was described as limbless, the legs and arms having been worn or torr off by the action of the waters. That paper says :- Mr. Valtier, a respectable resident of the town of Lake, lives near the lake shore, a little south of the St. Francis Seminary. His words may be taken as true in every particular, as he is too well known to originate a yarn for the mere purpose of a sensation. Mr. Valtier claims that he was upon the beach and distinctly saw a limbless corpse tumbled here and there in the high surf. The waves would throw the body toward the land and then the undertow would draw it far out on the waves again. It was impossible for Mr. Valuer to secure the body with the means at his hands. So the body was left to don't its strange way upon the waters of the boisterous lake. Some little distance below Mr. Valtier's house a small creek empties into the lake. The limbless body floated toward the mouth of the creek, and the waves forced it up its mouth, and there it was again seen by one of Mr. Valtier's neighbors, who, on account of the steach from the body and a natural repugnance to dead things, did not secure it; and after a while it floated out into the lake again, and has not been seen since. The strangest part of Mr. Valtier's story remains to be told. After the storm had subsided he was walking upon the sands, ROOFING and SPOUTING made to order and thinking perhaps that the body be had seen might have washed ashore. Suddenly distance of the state of the st his attention was attracted to a fine call up, and found that it was very heavy. Very naturally he supposed that the boot was filled with saud, and that caused the weight. He shook the boot in order to remove the sand, and then found, to his horror, that a human foot and leg yet retained ession of their protection when life animated the now decayed and senseless fragment of a man. The boot was thrown down in disgust by the finder. The boot is described as a fine French calf boot, No. 6 in size. It had not, evidently, belonged to a seaman. It is, of course, only a matter of conjecture, yet it is quite probable that the boot was worn by Donaldson on that fatal night when he sank into the waters of the lake. The boot should be recovered, as it could probably be identified by some of Donaldson's friends, if he had ever worn it.

NOVEL CURE FOR LOVE .- A new and amusing cure for love has lately been found effective in a fashionable Parisian faubourg. The son of a wealthy nobleman became enamored of his father's concierge (door porter), and determined to marry her. The aristocratic papa opposed, but moved at CARPETS AND OIL-CLOTHS, last by the despair of his son gave his consent, with the proviso that the smitten youth should go to sea for twelve months before the marriage. Shortly after his departure, the father, who had previously observed an emboupoint in the young bride intended, took her under his especial charge, gave her the most succulent food and wines, forbade her to take exercise as unbecoming in his future daughter, and, in fact, stall-fed her to such an extent that when the engaged swain returned from his year's voyage he was horrified to find, instead of the slender, elegant girl he left, an immensly fat woman, as big as two Albions rolled into one. Of course the ruse was successful, and the unfortanate victim of good cheer has been pensioned off.

+40+ DIDN'T SELL HER AN ORGAN. -It takes a woman to repulse a traveling agent sometimes. The other day a man called on Mr. C. at his place of business, and wanted to sell him a parlor organ. Mr. C., not wishing to buy, referred him to his wife. On the man's making his business known to the lady, she asked him if Mr. C. had sent him to her. "Yes, ma'am," be replied. "Well, sir," said Mrs. C., "you just go back and tell him that until that is necessary around this house." The agent concluded be couldn't sell an organ
