The negro is called the "Wild Negro" of 'Obion," from the fact that he lives in a nucle state, through winter and summer, in a mud-hole, and has dwelt there for five years past. He calls himself Edmund, and has no recollection of ever having been called by any other came, though born within fifteen miles of the spot at which he seems to have permanently located himself.

He professes to have the "blood fe ver," which he esteems curable through no other means than by standing in a hole, about four feet square, filled with mud and water to the depth of his knees. He keeps a fire always burning in such a position as to permit the wind to blow the smoke of it upon his person. During cold weather he heats the water by throwing hot ashes into it. The strong lye thus produced has caused the splitting open of the calves of his legs and made the skin very sealy from the ankle to the knee. One-half of each foot has been frozen off, in consequence of which he now finds some difficulty in getting about, hobbling instead of walking. Before he was possessed of the strange belief that he had been stricken with the "blood fever" be must have been a very large, heavy man. Though he has passed through the four seasons five times without a change from the clothing which nature gave him, yet he is still muscular, though raw-boned and awkward, standing six feet without his socks. Edmund has subsisted on a very ordinary diet, consisting of dry corn and pumpkins. When driven out of his favorite spot of earth by a freshet he hobbles to an old barn not far distant, and impatiently awaits the far distant, and impatiently awaits the going down of the tide, when he returns to stand in the mud and slush as before. The weather has so toughened his skin that it appears is hard and as thick as medium quality of leather. It would seem, from the story of convergious sportsman, that the of our veracious sportsman, that the negro is crazy, and having mistaken the symptoms for that of "blood fever"

FEED DRY COWS CORN MEAL. Last season the hay crop was short in this section-so much so that it was necessary to reduce our stock. I commenced in November to feed each cow one pint of meal per day. Some might think that was too small a quantity to result in any good, but my experience is otherwise. When my cows became new milch they add did finely. I had no trouble with them. I was so pleased with the results that I said that if I had double the hay my stock required, I should feed meal every winter in small quantities,
