THE CAMBRIA FREEMAN.

Ebensburg, Pa., FRIDAY. - - NOV. 5, 1875.

Death of Capt. J. K. Hite.

It becomes our sad and painful duty, after two-thirds of our present issue has been worked off, to announce the sudden and unespected death of our well known and much rep cted townsman, Capt. J. K. HITE, late thonotary of this county, which occurred Prothonorary at his residence in the West Ward at halfat his results this (Friday) morning. Deast the streets on Wednesday last, seemingly in his usual health and spirits, nothing whatever about his outward aphis, nothing giving a sign of approaching dislation, and few of our people being aware of his illness until the startling announcement reached them that he was dead. His disease was hemorrhage of the bowels. The remains, we presume, will be taken to Johns-town for interment. Obituary pext week,

-A young man named Frank Robbins fell from the roof of a house in Clearfield, a distance of about twenty feet, on Friday afternoon last, and striking on his head and shoulders, received very severe internal and external injuries, his body being paralyzed iom the waist down. He now lies in a very critical condition.

-It seems like a queer joke to receive on the second day after the election an address from Chairman Wright ordering a charge along the whole line and promising victory the full Democratic vote should be polled but then we suppose the thing went astray in the mails, and that's why it didn't reach us at the proper time.

-Godfrey Wolf, whose clothing establishment is the oldest and mest extensive in Blair county, has just returned from the rastern cities-Philadelphia, New York, Rochester, &c.-where he purchased the largest stock of clothing ever brought to Altoona, including a fine assortment of overtoats of all styles and prices. -Amid the general gloom which overshadows the Democratic party it is a great consolation to know that the entire county licket has been successful, notwithstanding he bifter fight which was waged against wo of the candidates by men in our ranks who for the time permitted their feelings to get the better of their discretion. -Mr. John Lantzey's water saw mill, in

Chest township, was destroyed by fire on Priday night last. How the fire originated is a mystery, as it was not discovered until the building was almost consumed. Considerable lumber was also burned. Loss estimated at 1,000, on which there was no insurance. Mr. L., we are told, will soon re-ship, succeeded in killing a bear weighing 425 pounds on Monday morning last. He tracked the varmint out of Mr. Anthony McNellis cornfield, in Gallitzin township, and followed him into some laurel, a considerable distance from the starting point, where he succeeded in briging down Mr. Bruin at the first shot. -A young man named George Smith attempted to get off the mail train west at

-Mr. Augustine Berkey, of Cambria township, desires us to say that he is ready and willing to meet Mr. Frank Cramer, the Chest Springs gentleman who won the beef a few days ago three times in succession, and wager any reasonable amount that he can beat him in a shooting match at twenty-five yards, off hand, best two in three, or at any other distance desired up to one hundred yards. Put up or dry up-that's the kind of a man Berkey is.

-Owing to the fact that the official vote for Jackson township had not been received up to six o'clock yesterday evening, and also to the fact that it was impossible to get the use of an official table until too late to correct our figures and make the mails, we have been forced to publish an unofficial statement of the vote in this county. Elsewhere, however, we present the footings up on all the candidates, and will publish the official returns in our next issue.

-A singular case of death from fright occurred at Osceola, Clearfield county, on Thursday last, as we learn from the Reveille.

A farmer named Smith visited that place with a load of produce on the day mentioned. and had just reached a point contiguous to the railroad when the mail train approached at a rapid speed. Both of his horses became at once unmanageable, and the one next to the train reared twice, gave one convulsive shudder, and fell dead on the spot.

-At a regular meeting of the Poor House Directors, beld at that institution on Wednesday last, Mr. I. Lilly was reappointed and continued as stewart of the Poor House, Dr. James J. Oatman as physician for the same, and Dr. A. Yeagley was chosen as physician for the out-door paupers at and within five miles of Johnstown. It was also resolved to hold the meetings as heretofore on the first of each month, and all bills are to be sent in at the end of each month without fail.

-Clearfield has produced two beets which weigh seven pounds one ounce and six pounds tweive ounces respectively. B'g beets those for a clear field, but a bigger beat and a cleaner field than either of them is the way that James J. Murphy, of 109 Cliston street, Johnstown beats all his rivals in the sale of made-up clothing and farnishes a clear field for everybody to go in and win good bargains. A hefty stock of fall and winter apparel and furnishing goods just received.

-Oh, the changes will follow the years as they go, and shadows must mingle with sunlight we know; the flowers we gather will wither at last; the songs we are singing be lost in the past; but that is no reason, nor none can be guessed, why people with mon-ey shouldn't quickly invest in dry goods and groceries, and many things more, which at Myers & Lloyd's famous cash store can be bought at prices so cheap that none can deny that the bargains they give are not all in your eye—no indeed, not by a long shot.

OFFICIAL MAJORITIES.-The Associate Judges met at the Court House vesterday to count up the vote of the county at the late election. We publish below the aggregate vote received by the different candidates, but as the vote of Jackson township had not been delivered to the Prothonotary up to the bour when the counting was finished. We include it as it was received here from

DEATH OF MR. JAMES SMITH .- Nota few among the readers of the FREEMAN will be pained to learn of the death of Mr. James Smith, which occurred at his residence in Jersey City, N. J., on Sunday last. He was indeed one of God's noblest works, as honest man, a sincere and earnest Christian, a devoted induigent husband. indulgent husband and father, and a true, generous hearted friend. His age was about 48 years and his disease consumption. His death was preceded by that of his fanghter Amanda, aged about 19 years, who died of the same disease only a few days previous, and whose remains were kept in a vault in anticipation of the demise of her father. Both bodies were brought to Altoona and interred in the Catholic cemetery on Tuesday last, the double funeral cortege forming one of the saddest sights ever witnessed in that city. May their souls rest in peace.

Owing to some cause or another the lady desired to stop the correspondence and to exchange each other's letters. To this the young man responded that she should first return his letters and that then he would return hers. To this the former very sensibly objected, and, while in this dilemma, the lady concluded to have the advice of one of our young business men on the subject, and at once laid it all before him. Twenty-four hours sufficed for her friend to perfect a plan, which was considered entirely safe, to make the exchange. The young lady immediately wrote to the young man in Johnstown that he should meet her in the parior of the Merchant's hotel at 12:30 p. m. next day; that he should bring her letters with him and be prepared to exchange. The nice young man swal-lowed the balt that was to humble him for life. At the appointed time the young man entered the parlor, all smiles, and with a musical voice, not unlike the screech of an owl, passed the compliments of the day, which the lady inquired if he had brought her letters, at the same time pocketing his. A few words passed as to who seemed to afford the young Johnstowner he smiled very blandly, and, in a voice, something like the hiss of a serpent, replied that he could not afford to give up her letters as they afforded his friends as well as himself amusement when there was nothing else to pass upon. To this the lady indignantly protested, while he still objected to giving up the letters. With the letters in one hand and hat in the other, he was about turning to leave the room, when click, click! broke on the stillness of the room, and the Johnstown sport, whe, but a moment before, spoke so defiantly, felt the cold muzzle of a revolver at his temple with the words hissed in his ear, "Villain, utter but one word, and what little brains you have will be scattered The dashing Johnstown swell trembled in his boots, turned ashy pale, and letters and hat dropped from his hands to the floor. While this scene was transpir-ing the young lady gathered up the letters and left the room. The young lady's friend had accompanied her to Johnstown, and remained outside the door until the moment the young man was about leaving the room, when he swiftly glided to his side with the above result. Little more remains to be said. After the young lady came take possession of the letters and had left the room, a little sound and wholesome advice was given to the crestfallen Johnstown youth, when he was shown to the head of the stairs and ALTOONA'S "BRIDGE OF SIGHS."--She stood, a Nemesis, on the iron bridge at Altoona-the bridge which crosses the maze of tracks of the P. R. R. She was tall and gaunt and grim-cadaverous looking-very; her gums were toothless, and her nose long enough to reach through the fence of a potato field and take up the third row. It was night and the Phila, Ex. was due. She appeared to be expecting some one, for her gaze was fixed on the western hills in the direction of the expected train. Ever and anon she clutched the iron railing of the bridge, twining her long, bony digits around it, as though in her desperation she would wrench it from its fastenings, the while muttering, as did 'Mariana in the Moated Gracge," who only said: "I am aweary; he cometh not," while our heroine exclaimed: "If I but had him here, oh, deary, deary, how I'd punch his head."

The train arrives. It is discharging its passengers. Soon from amidst the throng a couple can be seen approaching the bridge. They are walking, arm in arm, and engaged in a very earnest conversation, "speeding," as it were, "the soft intercourse from soul to soul." The long, lean, cadaverous watcher on the bridge catches a glimpse of their movements; her quivering nostrils "snuffeth the battle from atar," and grows white, then crimson, on the tip; her "soul's in arms, and eager for the fray." They are coming up the steps. She concentrates her forces and prepares for the onset—the approaching party is her husband and one of Altoona's soiled was to deliver first, when the lady finally doves; they had been to Gallitzin on a spree.

As they reached the top of the bridge the As they reached the top of the bridge the considerable amusement, from the fact that already crouched for the spring, made a terrific leap; like an enraged tigress she sprang upon her prey. One grasp at the mahogany head of the strange woman and that damse ascended several feet in the air and instantly disappeared, no one knows where-over the parapet of the bridge, possibly. One blow at the proboscis of her husband and that indi-vidual rushed for home with a velocity never equaled, the female with the lengthy bugie, the victor of the short but decisive conflict, in close pursuit, carrying in her hand a forty-cent switch of flaming red hair. We will not describe the scene which ensued when she reached her domicil, but when the neighbors came in they found the house strewn with fragments of broken crockery and farniture, old boots and clothes, table legs, pokers, and other missiles of a dangerous character. On the floor was a prostrate form and over it was bending the family doctor; they breathlessly awaited his decisien in regard to the fallen for; he looked up with a grave countenance, and in solemn tones said: "I may be able, in the course of a few weeks, to reduce his head so that it will again fit his hat." Of the sinful partner of her husband's guilt naught is known, except that the railroad watchman, on his midnight rounds, picked up, under the bridge, a bunch of hair-pins fastened in a tuft of red hair, an old shoe and a glass eye. All else is a mystery-and no other paper has the news .- E. W. E. of kindly requested to make haste his departthe Wilkensburg East Ender.

THE DESTRUCTION OF MORRISON, BARR & Co.'s PAPER MILL. - We referred briefly last week to the fact that the paper mill of Morrison, Bare & Co., at Roaring Spring, Blair county, from whence we drew our supplies, had been totally destroyed by an explosion, and are now enabled to give full particulars of the calamity, gleaned from the last issue of the Hollidaysburg Register :

On Monday morning last, about 8 o'clock, a heavy rumbling report was heard at the Paper Mill of Messes. Morrison, Bare & Co., at Roarheavy rumbling report was heard at the Paper Mill of Messrs. Morrison, Bare & Co., at Roaring Spring, this county, and upon looking in that direction, heavy irons, timbers, and different kinds of machinery, wasseen flying in every direction, and the paper mill was a vast heap of rules. The Straw Digester, a sort of engine, had bursted. It was 18 feet in length, 6 feet in diameter, ½ inch iron; weight? tons. It went high up in the air, several hundred yards, till it appeared not larger than a common sized tin bucket, and alighted in a field upon the hill, some two hundred yards away—the smaller end striking the earth and siaking 5 feet into the solid ground, the other part breaking off and alighting some 25 feet below.

The smoke stack was blown beyond the church, about ½ mile. Heavy irons and timbers, shot like arrows, from one end of the building to the other, and other heavy articles in all directions, and it is providential that no lives were lost although several persons were bady injured. The Straw digester usually carried 80 pounds of steam, and was calculated to carry 200 pounds with safety—though this morning she had on only 75 pounds, and it is not known, or at least not yet made public, what was the cause of the explosion.

The injured are—John Henry, badly scalded; and bruised: Ames McKee, badly scalded; Frank Hancock, badly scalded; bruised and cut. John Hainzy, badly scalded; Baxter Hamilton, scalded badly; and David Butler, Wim. M. Hancock, and John Price, slightly injured by bruises and cuts. Although the first s.x named are seriously injured, yet the physician, Dr. Stayer, thinks they may all recover.

Four of the above persons were buried in the debris, and were not rescued from their perilous position for about 15 minutes—John Suyder was blown from the door of the engine room, some 25 feet, to the top of the roof of the machine shop, and came down with the roof, and escaped only with a bal fright.

The mill is a perfect wreck; in fact, we have never before seen such a complete pile of rains. The machinery, timbers, &c., are scattered around in all directions, for several bundred yards, and nearly all the machinery is destroyed or badly injured. About $3,900 of prepared stock was a total loss—and the loss to building, machinery and stock will not full short of $30,000. Messrs, Morrison, Bare & Co., hav; been very unfortunate with this mill. About seven years ago, it was destroyed by fire, and a few years later, an explosion occurred, causing considerable loss. At the time of this last accident, Mr. Morrison was in Fittsburgh, Mr. Bare was in Philadelphia, and the only one of the firm at home was Mr. Eby.

We were informed by Mr. John Scott, the gentlemanty foreman, that had the explosion occurred five minutes sooner, all the workmen then in the mill, some twenty five, including gentlemsnly foreman, that had the explosion occurred five minutes sooner, all the workmen then in the mill, some twenty five, including nine females would likely have been killed. They had all, within that time changed their position, the females to the paper room in the small, new addition, which was not much injured, except one of the ladies who was buried in the ruins, but gotten out without being injured.

Some forty persons, by this accident, are thrown out of employment. Our people all sympathize with the enterprising proprietors—and we trust that they may speedily be enabled to rebuild the mill. to rebuild the mill.

MORELAND.-Died. fa Wilmore, Oct. 24, 1875,

MORELAND.—Died. in Wilmore, Oct. 24, 1875, after a long and painful illness, which she sanctified by wonderful patience and cheerfulness, Anastasia, wife of James Moreland, in the 57th year of her age.

She was in every respect a most exemplary woman, faithful and kind, illustrating in her daily walks and conversation the high sanctities of womanly purity and filial devotion. And while the falling leaves, the chilly winds and cheeriess earth reminds us of the rapidity of while the falling leaves, the chiliy winds and cheeriess carth reminds us of the rapidity of decay—of the fleetness of time—she has been called to a land where leaves never wither, where the brightness of day reigns throughout eternity, where peace is given to the troubled and where joy is given to them that sorrow

Not forever has she lett us.

The one for whom we shed our tears;
Not forever shall our mourning

Darken long and dreary years.

There shall be a joyous meeting

When the reign of death is o'er,
In the nouse where all are happy.

In the nouse where all are happy.*
On that bright and heavenly shore KELLY.—Died, at Gallitzin, on Friday, Oct. 29th, 1875, Many Jane, infant daughter of M. F. and Annie Kelly, aged 2 months and 9 days.
