Weight of Water Rained.

There are many natural facts and phenomena presented to our almost duly observation, of a very interesting The discoverer and compounder of the farcauracter, which very few persons, even among the intelligent, ever study and contemplate. How many persons, for instance, could give anything like an approximate guess at the weight of the water discharged from the clouds in the storm that visited our city on Sunday evening.

Let us calculate. Suppose that the rain cloud extended over an area of country ten miles square, which is a very low estimate. Now it was ascertained by a young lady of this city that rain fell at this point to the depth of 11 inches by actual measurement. That is to say, if the surface of the earth had been perfectly plain and horizontal and impermeable to water the whole surface would have been covered after the rain by a sheet of water 11 inches deep.

There are 144 square inches in a

In a short time the fever will break out in an eruption all over the body. All that is necessary is to keep the patient warm and protected from draught, and recovery is certain. Mr. Christie says he has been employing this remely for many years, and never knew it to ful when proper care was taken of the patient after its application. One family, in which there were five children down with the disease at one time, recently used the simple remedy upon his telling them of it, and every one of the little ones recovered in a

WHY WE USE THE RIGHT HAND .-The habit of using the right hand in preference to the left, among those people whose monuments date from the remotest antiquity, appears to be a universal fact, and this is accounted for by the anatomical mechanism of the human body. It is known that the right lung, liver, lobe and limbs exceed in size those of the left side, involving, of course, a greater amount of tissue structure and a larger supply of nerves and blood vessels for their nutrition. A person walking in a 330 North Sixth Street, Philadelphia. dense fog figures with his feet the segment of a circle, and if he is righthanded he takes direction to the left, because the right leg naturally takes a longer stride. The left side of the brain is larger than the right, and as it appears that the power of verbal articulation in the right handed is confined to a certain convolution on the left side, the conclusion is arrived at that in speaking and thinking, the left side of the brain is used, this being the result of dextral education. The opinion has also been expressed by some medical writers that amnesia and aphasia in right handed men indicate disease of the left brain, and that hammer palsy and writers' cramp show the results of excessive working of the left brain.

FLOATING GARDENS .- 'n the beautiful valley of Cashmere, among the Himalayan Mountains, lies a lovely lake called Dal. Floating about on the surface, sometimes carried by the winds from one and of the lake to the other, are numerous small islands, or which grow the fairest cucumbers and the most fluscious, metalicis, or present the season of the lake grow quantities of reeds, sedges, and water life. The leaves of the plants are them spread out over the stems, making a sort of treatle work to support the soil with which it is next to decovered. After this has been done, the seeds are planted, and the flosting gardens are ready for picking — St. Nicholas.

Whilst visiting the Centennial Exposition, Vineland can be visited at small expense.

A paper containing full information will be sent free of cost on application to CHARLES K. LANDIS, VINELAND, N. J. The following is an extract from a description of Vincland, written by the well-known agriculturist, Solon Robinson, and published in the New York Tribune:

All the formers were of the "well to do" sort and some of them, who have turned their attention to fruits and market gardening, have grown rich. The soil is loam, varying from sandy to clayey, and sur'ace gently undulating, intersected with small streams and occasional wet meadows, in small streams and occasional wel meadows, in which deposits of peat or muck are stored, sufficient to fertilize the whole upland surface, after it has been exhausted of its natural fertility. It is certainly one of the most extensive tracts, in an almost level position, and suitable condition for pleasant farming, that we know of this side of the Western Prairies. We found some of the oldest farms apparently just as prafitably productive as when cleared of forest fifty or a hundred years ago.

The geologist would soon discover the cause of this continued fertility. The whole country is a marine deposit, and all through the soil we found evidences of calcareous substances, generally in the form of indurated calcareous mark, showing many distinct forms of ancient shells, of the tertility formations and this market and the second country to the country of the second country to the country of the coun thavy formation: and this marly substance is scat-tered all through the soil, in a very comminuted form and in the exact condition most easily assim-ilated by such plants as the farmer desires to culti-pate. WOMEN'S WAYS FOR MEN'S BENEFIT -A little woman's wisdom would help the other sex greatly if such wisdom could only be imparted to the "stubborn men." The phrase "superfluous women" has created great indignation among the persons thus libelled. And it is no wonder, for if the truth is fairly stated, it will be found that there are more "superfluities" among men than women, when duil times are the rule, and labor or employment is hard to obtain. Men congregate in the streets, at corners, or in public-houses, or, at the best, have to lounge at their business places and -to come down to a colloquial phrase made famous by the lamented and lamenting, though sanguine Mr. Micawber-wait for "something to turn up." Its from the "stronger," and tempts one to say that the application of the terms should be reversed. For a proof of the better "managing" power of women, we need only refer to the contrast between cases of families of half orphaus, when the father or the mother is removed by death. The widower often gives up the contest with adversity at the beginning. In what the "somehow" consists, it might take many words to describe. But "anyhow," it does exist, as everybody knows, and as men prominent in every walk of life could testify, simply by relating their own experience.

This capacity of women for getting on under difficulties made public, rather than developed by widowhood - really exists, and is in exercise all the time. A BRAVE ACT .- The Boston Traveler says that a few days since, as an excursion train of eighteen heavily laden cars on the Vermont division of the Portland and Ogdensburg railroad had commenced the descent of a heavy grade between the St. Johnsbury and the Connecticut river, the engineer suddenly descried three cattle upon the track just in advance of him. To drive or frighten them from the track, or to seasonably stop the train, was impossible. Instantly he decided upon his course. He sent his fireman to disconnect his engine and tender from the train, whistled "down brakes," and with full steam on, plunged forward alone, and with the impetus thus gained threw the cattle from the track.
