

The Freeman

A. McPIKE, Editor and Publisher.

EBENSBURG, PA., FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1877.

Terms, $2 per year, in advance.

NUMBER 26.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

W. A. S. G. A. C.

Warranted to be the best and most reliable of any... BARGAINS! CASH.

BARGAINS! CASH.

Warranted to be the best and most reliable of any... BARGAINS! CASH.

BARKER & SON

Are now offering to the people of northern... BARGAINS!

LOOK AT SOME OF THEIR PRICES:

Prints, good fast color, 10c per yard	Best quality, 10c per yard
Reveries, 10c per yard	Best quality, 10c per yard
White muslins, 10c per yard	Best quality, 10c per yard
White muslins, 10c per yard	Best quality, 10c per yard
White muslins, 10c per yard	Best quality, 10c per yard

W. A. S. G. A. C.

A. A. BARKER & SON,
EBENSBURG, PA.

Superd Clothing

For men and boys, which they do not presume... W. A. S. G. A. C.

Miller House

Greenburg, Pa.

Lightning Protection

The Pierce Tobacco Co. Brooklyn, N.Y.

PEBBLES IN THE SEA.

An Old Poem.
Who shall judge a man from dress?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Prayers may be fit for princes,
Prayers fit for soldiers, soldiers,
Crump shirt and dirty jacket
May be clothed the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings:
Satins, silks and silks no more,
There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever swelling out of some;
There are purple buds and golden,
Goddess, crushed and overgrown;
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me
While he values thrones, the highest,
But as pebbles in the sea.

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, QUEENSWARE,

At cost for cash!
And many other goods at less than their cost in quantity, and will continue so as long as the clothing store is open.

STRANGE BANK ROBBERY.

HOW THE CRIME WAS TRACED TO THE "TEN TRIP" TRAVELLERS.

CHERRY-SMOKE MATCHLESS

The Pierce Tobacco Co. Brooklyn, N.Y.

Lightning Protection

The Pierce Tobacco Co. Brooklyn, N.Y.

Lightning Protection

The Pierce Tobacco Co. Brooklyn, N.Y.

Lightning Protection

The Pierce Tobacco Co. Brooklyn, N.Y.

of April, and, as we are comparatively strangers here, I thought it best to pay it at once. I looked over the contents of this ten-dollar note I could make out the amount. I gave the money to the messenger with some suggestion that if he had done something wrong, he should be careful, which I had not expected so soon, make the matter right. I had just related the circumstance to him when you came in.

Although the story seemed a very plausible one, and Remington was evidently a respectable person, a warrant was soon issued for their arrest. A preliminary hearing before a magistrate was had, and they were bound over to the next term of the county court. Mr. Remington's friends readily furnishing bonds, he and his wife were released of their liberty.

The attention of the little group around the bar was attracted to the "Ten Trip Travellers," and the conversation turned to the robbery of the Elm street bank. The story was repeated, and the conversation turned to the robbery of the Elm street bank.

One day during the early summer the family physician, who had known Ethel intimately from her infancy, surprised Mrs. Remington one morning when she had left her room, and he believed it to be in some way connected with the bank affair.

One evening in the following April, Mr. Withersell, owner of a store in the village, called on Mrs. Remington, the bank president, and showed her a bank note which both the gentlemen agreed was the same one that Mr. Withersell had deposited in the bank on the afternoon preceding the robbery.

After some further conversation upon the subject, the two gentlemen went together to call on Mrs. Remington. They found that her husband had just returned from a two weeks' business trip.

When we purchased this house Mr. Remington, the former occupant, proposed that we should take the furnishings of the room; had that been made in order to suit the rather curiously shaped room. An antique chair fits the curve of the side-way, the mirror, the clock, just suits the niche made by the chimney flue, and the carpet, of course, was cut to fit the floor.

"At the beginning of the spring term, Julia had changed around so as to room with me. She used to talk to me to room with me completely carried away with the alluring details of the proposed trip. She pictured the sensation 'en elegantly dressed and handsome young American ladies' who were to accompany the fashionable circles in Europe, with tired young men following in our train and giving us entertainments.

"When you sent Mrs. Remington to look at our house the thought came to me that I would not tell her about the secret cupboard, and that perfected my plan. I could always go about the dark freely and in familiar places, and find anything I wanted nearly as easily as if it were light.

"I hurried out of the bank, though carefully locking the safe and doors after me, and went directly across the street to Mrs. Remington's. I easily entered the hall and placed the bag in the cupboard. That ten dollar note, no doubt, got displaced, while I was getting the bag in behind the hat rack to place it in the cupboard, and fell on the floor.

"I had dreamed over and over of repaying the money, and have thought about it all the time when awake. I am so bad I can never hope to be forgiven, but I am glad that you, papa, now know it all, for I have felt and would have felt that I had done you and everybody who has known me.

"The long dreary weeks of sickness, suffering and contrition that Ethel endured were thought to be sufficient punishment for the crime she had committed, if indeed it could be held as such.

"I was very handsome and fascinating and had been in society a great deal, but I was so far from it that I could not be said to have been in it.

"I had not been in society a great deal, but I was so far from it that I could not be said to have been in it.

MRS. SMITH'S NEIGHBORS.

I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

SOMETHING FLIRT.

Barney's boy left a sack of flour at Archibald's last evening. It was one of those evil minded paper sacks, and had a hundred pounds in it.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.

"I know it is not very kind to make comments upon the affairs of one's neighbors, and yet there are some things that I have seen at the Jones' (which, by the way, are practiced by other families as well,) which I feel justified in calling attention to.