----In a recent sermon Henry Ward Beecher boldly avowed his disbelief in the existence of hell. The same doctrine has lately been preached in England by Dr. Farrar, a distinguished clergyman of the Established Chuich, which has caused a vast deal of exeitement in that country. A very short time before Beecher's new departure, Dr. Porter, President of Yale College, and Dr. Hopkins, ex-President of Williams College, the two foremost Congregational seats of learning in this country, in a council held at North Adams, Mass., warmly espoused the same doctrine. If it had been known that Beecher repudiated the existence of a hell his testimony would have been exeluded on his trial for adultery, and the pulpit of Plymenth church would not have known him for a considerable length of time. His is the plainest case of a man whose "wish is father to his thought." It is a most comfortable belief, and the worst elements of society would no doubt like to see the dreaded place abolished. If Beecher
