THE question which in Europe to-day overshadows all others, is, "Will there be war between England and Russia?" The best answer to it is the belief expressed by the leading newspapers in London and St. Petersburg, that hostilities are lucvitable. The proposed congress of the European powers to discuss the terms of the treaty of peace between Russia and Turkey may be regarded as abandoned, since Austria, as well as England, has declared her dissatisfaction with some of the principal stipulations of the treaty. There is still, however, a bare possibility that a satisfactory understanding may be reached by the three governments named, and the peace of Europe be preserved. The present unsettled and threatening condition of affairs cannot last, but must result in peace or war within the next ten days. In the meantime both nations are making the most vigorous and extensive preparations for the impending conflict.

In December, 1877, before these forgeries were discovered. Miss Hampton bought $700 more city scrip from Mr. Reilly, giving him three orders, due in one, two and three months, on the Board of Education for salary due Miss Hampton and her mother, both of whom apparently signed the orders. Mrs. Hampton's signature was forged, and the Board of Education holds forged, and the Board of Education holds repetition.

In January last Miss Hampton obtained a loan of $1,500 cash on a note signed by son from President Fisher of the Emmet Bank. The indorsement was forged. She obtained the indorsement of a druggist of Memphis to her note for $500, by depositing with him forged notes of hand cailing for $2,800, and negotiated the indersed note at once. She borrowed several thousand dollars from personal friends without giving security, and finally borrowed money on a certificate of indebtedness given her by the Board of Education at her request, and then making affidavit that the certificate was lost, drew the money due her thereon. It should be added that last fall she made a present of a cart-load of new furniture to the pastor of St. Bridget's church, the bill for which was sent to the church some months later. There is scarcely a trace left of the thousands of dollars which Miss Hampton within a few months has secured by these devices. When accesed she denied almost everything, and seemed to be amused at her own detection. When her victims called to see her she upbraided them with faithlessness and treachery, and then commenced crying. It has been discovered that she has been a heavy purchaser of dry goods-principally ladies' wear-during the past year. At one house her annual bill amounted to $1,000 and at another some $800. Her bills at millinery establishments were also quite large, and at lewelry stores she occasionally made nice purchases. These dry goods, &c., she never wore, always dressing neatly and plainly, and what she did with them remains to be discovered. Figures furnished by the President of the Wine and Laguer Traders' Society indicate the saic of 1,250,000,000 glusses of liquid in this city in one year. Say that 900,000,000 of these are malt drinks and 300,000,000 alcoholic. Under the Excise has, now in force in Virginia, the city would derive an annual revenue of more than $12,000,000, all clear gain, and all out of the pockets of the blanlous classes. But if alco-bolic drinks were taxed only one cent each, in stead of two and a haif cents, and mult drinks one-quarter of a cent instead of half a cent, the returns would still reach the sum of $5,250,000. Add a moderate estimate of the rever specific licenses, and the aggregate would be about $6,000,000 a year.
