Entron Freeman—In our communication of linst week referring to our young friend of Loreito whose gentlemanly bearing and polite and courteous manners induced us to give his initials, which are "C. S.," but which appeared in print as "C. T.," we request you to make the correction, as we know of no one here whom the latter initials will fit. Kindness, especially when it comes from strangers, niways touches the heart, unless selfishness has flied it with all absorbing self, and in alluding to one from whom strangers receive many kind attentions, unsolicited and unexpected in our case, we depart from our usual custom. Money can buy a great many things, but it cannot buy what pertains to a real gentleman, in whom religion, they can fully realize that he was without guilt or sin as far as nuannn nature can be exempt from such infirmities. May be rest in peace.

It pains us to notice the sudden death of Sylvester P. Schettig, son of Adam and Mary Magdalane Schettig, of Cambria township, kyled by evening last. The unfortunate lad was some in the list, in the list inst, in the list, in the list inst, in the list, in the list, in the list inst, in the list, in the list inst, in the list, in the list inst, in the list inst, in the list, in the list inst, in the list inst. In the list inst, in the list inst. In the list inst, in the list inst, in the list inst, i quently observe a lack of these qualities in peo-ple who should know better, but it may be they are atraid their stock will become exhausted if they display their gallantry too often. Hence it is that they reserve their few Chesterfieldian airs for "the city," where they hope, if they ever reach there, to make 'an impression.'
The ple-nic is over, and was, as had been nuticipated, a complete success socially and we hope financially. The morning sun beamed brightly, giving promise of a day of unclouded fairness, which was very happly realized. The stream of humanity from various portions of this and adjoining countles kept pouring in notil the spurious grounds were filled and a witnessed. But what contrasts! we mentally exclaim as we take a seat near by and watch the genus home as they pass to and fro. Gay and graceful damsels "trip the light factastic" with an abandon truly refreshing, while clumsy ones spoil the "set" and are voted a nuisance. But here comes a bory of sweet looking girls, with the ruddiest of checks and the brightest of rithous, cestalically enjoying their holiday, for are they not accompanied by their beaux? But how any man wearing an ear-insurance But how any man wearing an ear-insurance collar of three inches and a "killing" cravat with one loop politting to the north pole, can find a giri to fall in love with him is beyond our find a girl to fall in love with bim is beyond our comprehension. Still there is no telling, gentiemen, where your chief charm lies. It may be in the sliver of your tongue or the sliver in your pocket, for the weaker vessels of bumantly are frequently paradoxical in their fancies. Yet they seidom tancy your sleek, soft-skinned Urlah Heep, with a smirk upon his countenance and the inevitable sainy stove pipe beaver, with star and ground floor apartments, phon with attic and ground floor apartments, open his head. Women seem to have an intuition that these olly-tongued, softly gliding lords of that these olly-tongued, softly gliding lords of creacion (?) are treacherous, and that their principles are not manly and independent.

It is growing later. Refreshment tables that in the morning ground under their load of good things, are being rapidly cleaned of their contents as the dancers, in rapid succession, particle of some of "the delicacies of the season" before Johning in the next "set." After refreshing the "inner man," we survey the surrounding country, which in the glowing sanset presents a panoraim of great beauty, the hofty mountain ranges towering in the distance as peak after peak rears its proud head aloft until best in the far off blue herizon. Soldier's disgusted and told him to burn the foolish book. The son kept the book, (he bes it now); studied it until he had completely mastered its contents, and declares that whatever he is or has been he owns to that little volume. It was the pivot on which his life history turned. It led him to purchase more books-large philosophical and other scientific works-and to master them, and made him, in short, a scholar, philipsopher, and an inventor. People have gone seventy-five or a hundred miles to get his views on some philosophical question or some geological specimen. While living in Ohio, fifty years ago, ha bought a bineksmith shop and tools, intend-ing to put a skilled workman in it; but, falling to secure one, began to mend chains, plows, etc., himself, and soon formal he could do anything usually done in such a shop. Now he can repair almost anything, from a small clock to a large engine. He makes a fine article of stereos ope, and the gyroscope, and has invented a sun dial adapted to any latitude. His hry'so, at eighty-five, is in good working order In 1837 Mr. Van Vorhes started the Hock-
