A Card form Mr. Marble.

A FICTION AND A FORGERY CHARGED UPON THE "TRIBUNE."

To the Editor of the Herald :

SIR : Your request a night or two ago at the Union club has induced me to look over the Tribune of the last two months and to hand you what I have to say there-

The Tribune ascribes to me while in Florida, November and December, 1876, the sending of certain telegrams which I never sent, the receiving of certain telegrams which I never received. One decisive instance will here suffice. Cipher telegram seventy eight (78), as translated and ascribed to me, is a forgery. It misstates the situation as I know it. It is ad message to or through any Mr. Havemeyer in all my life.

The Tribune affirms that after Nov. 22d "not a line was sent by, Mr. Marble, Herald, World and Sun, the Cinncinati Times, and Louisville Courier Journal, justify that belief with proofs now sifted and incontestible.

This fiction and that forgery are the two necessary hinges upon which the Tribune hangs every subsequent falsification of my opinion, purposes and acts.

I shall let these thirty or forty broadsides of disparagement pass on into echoes more or less noisy, because there happens | merchants had been directed by bill to asto be no telegram imputed to me, as there flicts with one fact, namely : I never atmanuer direct or indirect, or ever assentida, or even to hire them to certify that cats as a result of the freak. vote as it was cast by her people for the Tilden elector

THE GREAT CAT HOAX.

In August, 1815, just before Napoleon I. started on his exile to St. Helena a quantity of handbills were distributed through the city of Chester, England, at the direc tion of a very respectable looking, Quaker like sort of a personage, informing the public that a great number of genteel families had embarked at Plymouth to proceed dressed to H. Havemeyer. I never sent a to St. Helena with the troops appointed to guard the ex-Emperor. Now, St. Helena, the bills stated, was cursed with a plague of rats, and the British Ministry had pledged itself to clear the island of these noxions even in his most accret ciphers, implying a animals for the benefit of the resident citibelief that the Democrats had any right to zens. Peter B. Shearer has two of the most remarkable children in the country. He dwells at Stonersville, a little, straggling village ten miles neurer Philadelphia than His house is a plain, two story The most glaring yet successful of the frame, and Mr. Sheaver turns an honest penny in the blacksmith profession. The blacksmith is a stalwart man of about thirty eight, with black hair and beard and dark eyes. His wife, and the mother is a well developed, healthy woman. The Record reporter found two little cradles in Shearer's nearly furnished house. They were half as long as ordinary cradles, and looked as if one of full growth had been cut in half and remounted on separate rockers. They were little, old fashioned affairs, brown in color, with the varnish well worn off. Each contained a "babe. The father raised one of the children to his lap and the mother the other. Strangeoking little people, dwarfs, thin and pale and mere shadows of children. The father held the eldest, and called her "Dilly," for short. She is eight years old and weighs about eleven pounds. Blind and dumb, and just able to stand alone, she in indeed an object of pity. The little dwarf is about thirty inches tall, yet her lower limbs are as thin as an ordinary cane and her head about the size of a tea cup. "Can she hear," was asked of the father, "Ob. yes. Just listen." He gave "Dilly" to the mother's care, and slepped into the adjoining room. An organ stood there. The father played a lively air, and the first few bars set the little one to jumping and smiling. When Dilly was born she weighed about a pound. When she was a year old they could cover her head entirely with an ordinary teacup. She was blind all the time agea-The little dwarf has a luxuriant growthe Govsilken blonde hair that descends to be Bank shoulders. A pretty set of beeth is in her the mouth. This eight-year old child does not ble look to be over eight months. Just here a very healthy young boy entered the room. He is about sixteen years old, full breasted, square shouldered, erect, full of life, with great dark eyes and ruddy cheeks. "This is one of our children, said the father, "and here is another younger than the dwarf," A little boy came tripping into the room, full of mischief, stont, hearty, robust, and of full growth for his years. "You see," said Mr. Shearer, "we have children older and younger than these two, who are in every way healthy and of natur al development. The younger of the dwarfs is six years old and her weight is about a pound lighter than her sister's, We tie them to small scales and weigh them once a year, on their birthday. They appear to grow in length but not much in weight. They did not increase three pounds in three years. Why just look at their arms and fingers; just look like shadows and fingers less in thickness than pipe stems. Occasionally they are quite cross, but their time is principally passed in sleeping. They are as healthy now as most children, yet they cannot walk, nor see, nor talk, and in nearly all respects are helpless," Mrs. Shearer was in perfect health prior to the birth of the first child, but there had been scarlet fever in the family and several of their children died. Prior to the birth of the second dwarf the mother had ber diminutive child with her all the time. The next child born was as healthy as any child possibly could be. The children have the appearance of idiots. There forcheads are very much depressed, the tops of their heads being very small. The eldest child has the look of a person fifty years of age, while Virginia, the youngest dwarf, has a pleasan' countehis bowels, washes them, and returns them nance, like that of an infant.
