

IS PORK WHOLESOME?

The Germantown Telegraph breaks out into the following rhapsody in praise of its favorite meat, which will, no doubt, be appreciated by many.

We find a question raised as to the wholesomeness of pork, some parties declining against it as an article of food. What a piece of folly it is at this late day to raise such an issue. Pork eaters, comprised of about nine-tenths of the civilized population of the world, will scout at such nonsense. For all persons of active habits pork is just as wholesome as anything else and far more sustaining. It is true that it too much is eaten at a time—in other words, if people will make "hog" of their lives—they will have to suffer for it as for an over-measure of other "food." To discard our pork would be to discard one of the main items going into our "vital statistics." What became of the army and navy, of our merchant marine, of, in a word, the great mass of our population, if pork were to be thrown overboard? The meat is supremely absurd—the fact would be just cause for a summary revolution. No fool on, ye pork eaters, among whom we number ourselves, with a craving stomach; boil or broil your hams, pickle your sides, cabbage and trout your chins, season your pigs' feet, and enjoy yourself upon swine's meat to your heart's content and pocket's content. Fling dirt at the grave, patient, thankful creature, who anticipates his fate with a pleasure he cannot express in words, but which he signals to meet with the best possible grace. He may not laugh, it is true, but he grows fat without laughing, so much the more to his own profit and profit to his friend who liberally bestows upon him the wherewithal to fare sumptuously every day.

We shall stand by the hog. He is the patron of man, if he is generous. If he is not, it is because he is expected to return the compliment four-fold. If he is lazy it is because we give him nothing to do but eat, and grunt and groan in view not the grinch, was animal a title as much as man, and a full and reciprocal relation of kindness.

Pork unwholesome?—The members of a lean, cadaverous pig, to be kept, why is it alleged to be so? Is it because of its early digestion, or its Graham bread and weak tea, would be guilty of such a slander!

Indian Princesses' Gems—The princesses and nobles are greedy for diamonds beyond all people, and there is not a country in the world in which the property of nature is held in more esteem than this wonderful country. There is wonderful wealth in this wonderful country, and the most precious is held in the hands of the Indian Princesses. That country is rich in diamonds. The diamonds of the Indian Princesses are the finest ever known in Europe. They are found in the most beautiful and richest color which they are exposed to fire in which the diamonds can only be procured by wealth or favor of private individuals. No European has ever been permitted to see the king's wonderful ruby, the size of a pigeon's egg, and of extraordinary quality, and the sale of the two magnificent rubies which were brought to England in 1875—the finest ever known in Europe—caused such excitement that a military guard had to escort the persons conveying the package to the ship. Five days' journey south-east of Ava lies the home of the blood red gems, the jealous earth in which the people believe that they ripen, becoming from their original colorlessness yellow, green, blue, and last of all, the matchless ruby red. Next to these rank the rubies which are found in the Tartar wilds of Badakshan, and which the people there believe are always found in pairs. When a native discovers one, he frequently hides it until its mate is found.

A cheap lot of manure may be made of an old carcass of a horse or cow, etc., which are often drawn away to the woods to pollute the atmosphere. Do not do this, but put down four or five loads of manure or soil, roll the carcass on it and sprinkle it over with quicklime, covering over immediately with soil or mold sufficient to make with that already beneath, twenty good sized wagon loads, and you will have $25 worth of the best of fertilizers in less than a year, and no fears need be left in applying to any crop. One beauty of this plan is the animals need not be moved far away, there being not the least stench. All animals which you are unfortunate enough to lose can be utilized in this way, and be made to go a great way toward replacing them. Smaller animals, such as sheep, calves, dogs, and cats can be treated in the same manner with about the average amount of soil or manure proportionate to their size. When possible, place three or four in one pile, as the labor of covering would be proportionately less; but if it is not much so to make a heap of any animal, however small or large.

To the cry that very small organisms, either vegetable or animal, are the cause of all infectious diseases is very generally accepted at the present day. It passes as established and at most mathematically proven, because this theory alone is able to explain for us a series of phenomena that would otherwise be totally inexplicable. Hence the alpha and omega of all precautions directed against infectious diseases and epidemics consists in combating and destroying these organisms.
