The Hollidaysburg Standard pays a glowing and eloquent tribute to the memory of Capt. Alex. Dobbin, who died in that place a few days ago, every word of which we can heartily endorse, having known the deceased well and intimately since early childhood. More than that, we can say what the Standard editor no doubt has in his heart to say, may God in His mercy grant rest to his soul. Deceased was a John-lawyer of Poor Director Patterson, of a son-in-law of the late road law draftsman.

Mr. Michael J. Nagle, of Clearfield township, was for a number of years a locomotive engineer on both the Portage Railroad and the Pennsylvania Railroad, and in the year 1822 handled the lever of the locomotive that made the first trip through the tunnel of the latter road at Gettysburg. We were a passenger on a truck attached to the locomotive on the occasion referred to, and are consequently in a position to know precisely whereof we affirm. Mr. Nagle, it might be added in this connection, is an ardent supporter of the Democratic nomination for Sheriff for the forthcoming term, and a good one he would make.

The quo warranto case requiring Mr. George B. Steiman to show by virtue of what right he presumed to exercise the functions of the several offices of County Auditor and postmaster of South Fork at one and the same time, the two offices being presumably incompatible under the provisions of Section 2 of Article XII of the new Constitution, came before Judge Dean on the 10th inst. The case being argued down on the list, however, it was held over for hearing at an Argument Court to follow the regular session in March next. A. V. Barker, Esq., appeared for Mr. Steiman, and Messrs. Johnston & Senlar for the petitioners.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A YOUNG EMBERSBURGER IN KANSAS.—In last week's issue of the FREEMAN we chronicled the departure of a colony who went to settle in Rooker county, Kansas. They left Wednesday evening, and if no detention happened to them en route would arrive at their place of destination the following Saturday morning. But as it happened, a perfectly fatal accident occurred at a point which can save the only effect of plunging the colony into gloom of the most painful nature.
