

EARLY DAYS OF GASLIGHT.

The use of gas for the purpose of producing artificial light was first introduced by Mr. Murdoch, of Redruth, in Cornwall. As early as 1792 this gentleman lighted his house with gas made in an apparatus of his own construction. It was not, however, until 1803 that any attempt was made to introduce it into London, when a Mr. Winsor lectured on the subject and exhibited a specimen of gaslight at the Lyceum. A company called the National Light and Heat Company was soon after projected by Mr. Winsor, and his supporters; and in January, 1809, with the view of convincing Parliament and the public of the practicability of his scheme, the company lighted Pall Mall, from St. James' street to Cockspur street.

According to his (Mr. Winsor's) calculations, "founded on official experiments," the profits were to be so large as to insure to the shareholders an annual interest of £570 ($2,850) for every £5 ($25) invested in the undertaking. He estimated that the value of the residuary products would reach nearly two hundred and thirty millions ($1,150,000,000) per annum. The Government was also promised that the scheme would produce in a short time ten millions ($50,000,000) in the way of taxes. These extravagant estimates naturally had the effect of exciting ridicule and opposition. In 1809 application was made to Parliament for an act to incorporate a company to be called the London and Westminster Chartered Gaslight Company, but owing to the prejudice that was entertained, chiefly from the idea that gaslighting was attended with danger, the bill was thrown out. Mr. Willerstone, by whom it was strongly opposed in the House of Commons, said he considered the scheme "one of the greatest bubbles that had ever been imposed on public credulity."

The application, however, was renewed in the following year, and this time it was successful. But still the lighting of a town with gas was for some time looked upon as a visionary scheme both by the public and men of science. Sir Humphrey Davy is reported to have asked, as a sneer, whether it was intended to use the doom of St. Paul's as a gasometer. With a view of inducing persons to adopt their invention, the gas company, in the first instance, supplied shops and houses both with gas and fittings, free of charge. After the year 1811 gas came more generally into use for lighting both streets and houses, but it was terribly dear. In 1815 the price was 15s. ($3.75) per one thousand cubic feet, and the amount consumed was guessed at, rather being then unknown. The extravagant promises as to the profits to be derived were not destined to be realized; and, indeed, for several years no dividends whatever were paid. It is a curious fact too, that it was some time before that gas would have the effect of lighting the pipes through which it passed; and when the passages in the House of Commons were first lighted with gas the architect caused the pipes to be fixed four or five inches from the walls, for fear of fire. On the other hand, a patent was taken out for making gaspipes of wood and paper. On the first introduction of the new light the demand for pipes was so great that some for a little time, there was considerable difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply, and musket barrels were used together and nailed for the purpose. Westminster Bridge was lighted with gas in 1818. In the following year the parish of St. Margaret, Westminster, set the example to the other parishes by removing the oil lamps and substituting gas in their place; and by 1820 it was pretty generally used throughout the metropolis. As an illustration of the strong prejudice there was against the new light and of the length of time this feeling existed, it may be mentioned that the Haymarket Theatre was not lighted by gas until April, 1833, the proprietor binding the lessee to adhere to the old-fashioned mode of lighting with oil.

CURING BACON WITHOUT SMOKE.—To smoke the best bacon, fat your logs early, and fat them well. By fattening early you make a great saving in food and well-fattened pork. Then kill as early as the weather will allow, and salt as soon as the animal heat is gone, with plenty of the purest salt and about half an ounce of saltpetre to 100 pounds of pork. As soon as the meat is salted to your taste, which will generally be in about five weeks, take it out, and if any of it has been covered with brine let it drain a little. Then take black pepper, finely ground, and dust on the back and as much as will stick; then hang it up in a good, clean, dry, airy place. If all this is done as it should be (it ought to be done now) you will have no further trouble with it, for by time, in spring, your bacon is so well cured on the outside that flies or bugs will not disturb it.

PULVERIZED ALUM possesses the property of purifying water. A large spoonful stirred into a boghead of water will so purify it that in a few hours the dirt will all sink to the bottom, and it will be fresh and clear as spring water. Four gallons may be purified by a teaspoonful.
