Arriving here she took up her residence in Los Anriving here she took up her residence in Los Anriving here she took up from the wreck by a fishing smack and taken to some remote fereign port, where he was thrown upon a bed of seckness, which is sted some fifteen months. In the mean time he had written repeatedly to his wife, but received no answer. In his despair he concluded to risk a journey across the Atlantit Feeble as he was he shipped before the must on a sating vessel, and in due time arrived in New York. From there he wrote three times to his wife, but received no answer. Almost frenzied at the thought that she might be dead, and being without lunds and no triends, he "faced" his fare clear to Kennucky, and shortly after arrived at Paris. Inquiries throughout the town assured him that his wife had disappeared a year or so before, no one knew whither. Some said she had gone in search of her husband, others that she might be dead, and others that she might be dead, and others that she had gone to Catfornia. He sought the old family physician, but he had left the town some time before. M. SHOOTING A MAN FOR REVENGE - A NOT Robert Jerolman, a mechanic, entered the Louse of Meivin b, Curtis, a groo r, this morning and shot him, the ball penetrating two inches on the left side of the navel. Curtis family was absent at church, and no one but the two man were present. Jerolman gave himself up at once. He appears deranged, and it is claimed that Curtis won from him the affections of his wife and induced her to abandon him. The prisoner is said to have previously offered to forgive his wife if she would discourage Curtis, but she refused to do so. Her refusal preyes upon his mind, and he has been in the habit of repeating expressions apparently wholly irrevelent in a crated manner to the mystification of his irlends, who could not imagine their meaning. Both are married men, Jerolman having one child, Curtis' wound is probably faral. He claims that Jerolman came to him for purpose, of bincamathing, and had been to him on smither errands before. laven, Conn., dispatch of the 11th says : On the way-bill was written, over the signature of B.
