

SHOW TWO HUNDRED FEET DEEP.

The following remarkable account of enormous snow falls in north-western India, shows that a world of vapor is carried inland on the monsoons from the Indian ocean, to strike against the lofty mountain chain in the world and be precipitated in such snows and rains as occur on the hills and valleys of the Himalayas.

USEFUL DOMESTIC HINTS.

Weigh and measure all purchases when they are brought home. Bains should not be bought in large quantities, as they are injured by time. A few drops of ammonia in water will thoroughly cleanse the dirtiest brush or comb.

Candles improve by being kept three or four months, and are better, therefore, if bought by the box. To test nutmers prick them with a pin; if they are good the oil will at once spread round the punctum.

Roaches are fond of flour-stuff, and if ten cents worth of phosphorus is stirred into it with a stick, they will be white with it. Mosses should be kept in a culler. Never keep pickles in glazed ware, as the vinegar forms a poisonous compound with the glazing.

Cheese soft between the fingers is richest and best, and should be kept in a box in a cool, dry place. Wipe off the mold with a dry cloth. Combs and house flies may be destroyed by feeding them with ground black pepper and sugar, as much as will lie on a dime, moistened with two teaspoonful of cream or rich milk. They eat it, seek the air and die out of doors.

Clippers which not infrequently break the grate and may be removed from these iron range backs by throwing half a dozen oyster shells into the fire when it is at all glow and covering them with fresh coal. When all are red hot the clippers become doughy, and are easily taken out.

Cover shelves with paper or bits of oil cloth. There is a peculiar kind of moth that is very destructive in winter and summer. Ordinary remedies do not disturb them. Whisk and beat the furniture with the hand frequently, as they do not like to be disturbed. To make cloth waterproof, take of powdered alum and of sugar of lead each one ounce, and stir them into a gallon of rain water, when the mixture is equally clear. Pour off the upper liquor. Choose Stovee or any light colored woven cloth, and put it into this liquor twenty four hours; then dry and press it. The cloth will be unharmed in color or texture and will turn any amount of rain to which the bearer is likely to be exposed.

The great addition to work and consuming of time in a house is bare flooring. I mean unpainted flooring, which is always an extravagant arrangement. In many public institutions, where there is plenty of help, I have noticed that every exposed plank of floor and stairway was painted. Every house-keeper can apply one of Linseed's gloss paints for herself, and thus save much unnecessary scrubbing. Two hundred and sixteen and two sevenpence are warm, cheerful colors. Nothing more than mopping out is then necessary—a child can do this. The French understand the folly of bare unpainted flooring.

A bottle of ammonia or hartshorn in a house is nearly as useful as soap, while its cheapness puts it within reach of all. Put a teaspoonful of ammonia in a quart of warm soap-suds; dip in a flannel cloth, and wipe off fly-specks, and dust, and see how much labor it will save. It will cleanse and brighten almost everything. It is a great help to a housewife in the kitchen, in cleaning silver spoons, forks, etc.; rub with a brush and polish with a chamois skin. In washing windows it is useful. It will take out grease spots from every fabric; put on the ammonia nearly clear, lay blotting paper on the place, and press a hot flat-iron on it for a few moments. If you want house plants to be shining or bloom, mix a few drops in the water you pour over them, doing so only once in five or six days.

FARMERS' READY MEASUREMENT.

Under the above head, says the Hemmington Monitor, we found in one of our exchanges a table something like the one below, but it was so full of errors as to be worse than nothing to the farmer. We have most carefully revised it, and made numerous additions, and can guarantee it to be accurate; and every farmer should clip it from the Monitor and stick it up where it can always be seen.

HIDING SEVEN YEARS IN A TREE.—The Midway Clipper has the following: Since giving an account last week of the large tree on Mr. F. B. Harper's place, we have learned that its history is even more interesting than we suspected. The man who made it his place of refuge was Charles Colston, and was an uncle, and not grandfather, of Harry Colston. He was the grandfather of Ab Perry, the trainer, and also of Luke Blackburn, the Versailles barber, and was, at that time, nearly 60 years ago, the carriage driver of Lord Robert Alexander.

Taking care of something, he informed the house girl that he intended to drive the carriage over a precipice and kill his master. She reported what had been communicated to her, and Charles was sold to a Southern trader, as stated. He was shipped South, where he picked cotton half a day, and knocked his overseer in the head with a log. Escaping, immediately, he made his way to Kentucky, and took refuge in a tree, referred to, where he lived seven years before his hiding-place became known. He was taken to the Versailles jail after being captured, where he was confined for some time. He was afterward bought by Mr. Miles, who then owned the Harper place, and at a later date was sent South again, since which nothing has been heard of him.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean remarks that the stockmarts do not have to cut the cat-skins to make shoes for St. Louis girls.

THE FIRST PAPER MAKER.

Who was the first paper maker? If we reply to this query should be, as is quite likely, that some old-time inventive genius was the man, it will be incorrect. The date of the invention and the founder of paper-making is not definitely known. The common wasp, however, the inventor. The big wasp's nest, which was always kept at a safe distance, and often knocked down with a stone during the rambles of boyhood, was composed of actual paper of the most delicate and elegant kind. As spiders were spinners of gossamer webs of intricate and exquisite pattern when men went about dressed in the shaggy skins of beasts, and could neither spin nor weave the beautiful and firm cloth fabrics of to-day, so little wasps, when people of the later and somewhat more advanced age had recourse to such rude and unsatisfactory substance as wood, stone and brass, and the bark of trees, and the hides of animals, on which to preserve memoranda, were making a material of far greater excellence.

Common house flies may be destroyed by feeding them with ground black pepper and sugar, as much as will lie on a dime, moistened with two teaspoonful of cream or rich milk. They eat it, seek the air and die out of doors.
