

Whether a third term of Grant or a first term of Blaine would be the worst, is a question upon which as much can be said on the one side as on the other.

MR. HANDALL has contributed very materially towards removing one of the obstacles to peace and harmony at the Democratic State convention next week, by addressing a letter to a friend of his in which he takes open and outspoken ground against the unit rule. If Mr. Wallace would do likewise, it might be that the convention would resolve itself into a Hancock love feast, where everything would be pleasant and of good report.

THAT political charlatan, Gen. N. P. Banks, who was a Greeley man in 1872 against Grant, but who is now a howling third term advocate, in a speech before the Massachusetts Republican convention last week, had the effrontery to falsify history by asserting that Washington, Jefferson and Jackson would have taken a third term if the people of the country had so desired. If Banks don't possess any of the power that can raise mortals to the skies, he is at least gifted with a great deal of that other talent which can drag angels down.

GALUBA A. GROW, who was again in Washington last week, expressed his belief that "if Grant is nominated at Chicago by the votes of the Southern State delegations they will have to elect him, as he most certainly will not carry Pennsylvania." Grow supported Greeley in 1872 as against Grant, and we will do him the justice to say that in our opinion he would not openly support Grant if he should be nominated, but would be willing to help him to the vote of this State by running a third candidate. Men like Grow may not love Grant, but their hatred of the Democratic party surpasses their opposition to a third term.

The Pittsburgh Post, in its restless anxiety to magnify the strength of Mr. Tilden with the Democracy of the State, says it has "the names of sixty out of seventy-six Democratic members of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg during the last session of the Legislature, which demonstrates that the State has been with Tilden all the time." We remember very well about these sixty members nominating Mr. Tilden last winter a year, but the Post will not seriously insist that these sixty members any more represented the Democratic sentiment of the State in regard to the Presidency, than any sixty Democrats anywhere would in giving expression to their own personal views.

The contest now going on within the Democratic party of this State is a pretty a quarrel as any one would wish to see. -Luz.

But it is not near "as pretty a quarrel" as is now going on within the Republican party of this State in general, and within the Republican party of Lancaster county in particular. The war to the knife contest in that loyal Republican stronghold, between the third term machine and the friends of Bob Ingersoll's "plumed knight," to say nothing of the deadly feud between the "Hog Bug" and "Hill Bug" factions, in which the New Era bears a conspicuous part, and on the right side, is a conclusive proof of the disunion and halibut elements that now divide the Republicans of the "Old Guard." The Democratic quarrel will end on Wednesday next, when the State convention meets at Harrisburg, whereas the Republican contest throughout the State can only be adjusted by the action of the Chicago convention if even then.

That section of the Philadelphia Democracy which is under the leadership of Richard Vaux, and is known as the "Comity Committee Democrats," got to work last week and elected in their own peculiar way eight Senatorial and thirty-eight Representative delegates, to go to Harrisburg next Wednesday and claim their seats in the State convention. Mr. Vaux went through a similar performance when the last State convention met, and although his success was by no means encouraging, he bore his defeat in the spirit of a true philosopher. Mr. Vaux is a veteran Democrat and has served his party long and well. We cannot, therefore, say anything unkind of him, but we think his present attitude is unsound, and we believe also that if it were not for the Presidential campaign this Philadelphia quarrel would long since have been satisfactorily settled. We trust that the convention will give Mr. Vaux and his cause a fair hearing, and that if it decides against him and his colleagues, as we believe it will, that he will yield to its action with as good grace as he did a year ago.

New York is a big State—so large indeed that it was thought by the Democrats that one State Convention was not enough, but that two ought to be held; and accordingly on Tuesday last the regular or Kelly convention, met at Syracuse, and on the same day the irregular or Kelly convention, assembled in the same city. The Tilden body was presided over by State Senator, John C. Jacobs, and the Kelly convention by Judge Parker, of Albany. The delegates to Cincinnati were not instructed by the regular convention to support Mr. Tilden, but they are known to a Tilden man, and will vote as a Tilden man. The Kelly or Tammany Hall gathering also appointed delegates to the national convention without any instructions, except to oppose Tilden's nomination. The Kelly body sent a resolution to the Tilden convention asking that a committee of sixteen be appointed to confer with a similar committee in the interest of harmony, but of course old and water would not mix. The situation, therefore, in New York is unchanged, and the war of organs will go on until the national convention meets at Cincinnati in June and makes its nominations.

Who has ever been able to discover what possible public use there is in having Harry White in Congress? If the people of his district are not weary and tired of his silly Congressional career, they will probably become so before the present session is brought to a close. His successful demand upon the treasury in aid of his preposterous scheme, not only to slack-water the Conomagh but to run it through the Allegheny mountain by means of a tunnel—the feasibility of which was officially vouchered for by no less an authority than Col. James Worrall—now supplemented by a military proposition that is calculated to excite our special wonder. He has introduced into the House a measure to "provide proper arms for the army and army of the United States, and for the militia of the several States and Territories." This is a big thing, and fully emanates from a high military source. It requires the Secretary of War, in connection with the General of the Army, to have 250,000 guns manufactured at the National Armory at Rock Island, Illinois, and a like number at the National Armory at Springfield, Mass., and also authorizes the Secretary of War to make a contract with not less than three manufacturers of arms for the construction of an additional 1,500,000 stand of arms, at a cost for each gun of between $15 and $18.50. There are other war items in White's little bill, but this is enough, and at an estimated expense to the government of not less than forty millions of dollars. Who but White would ever dream of a project contemplating the manufacture of two millions of rifles, with a regular army of 250,000 men, and the militia, not exceeding 115,000, already armed by the States, or supposed to be?

The anti-third term National Republican convention, which will meet at St. Louis on the 6th of May, promises to be largely attended, and its deliberations will be watched with more than ordinary interest. Its leading spirit in Missouri is John B. Henderson, a man of ability and one of the seven Republicans in the United States Senate who voted against the impeachment of Andrew Johnson. Mr. Henderson has just been on a visit to the Eastern cities, and has received assurances that they will send large delegations to the convention. The main purpose of its projectors is to defeat Grant's nomination at Chicago; but unless the programme marked out by Cameron, Conkling and the rest of the third term managers is interfered with in some other way, they will never abandon their purpose of forcing Grant's nomination at Chicago by anything that the St. Louis gathering may do. If the St. Louis convention contents itself with merely formulating a high-sounding protest against Grant's nomination, without at the same time proclaiming in very clear language its determination to oppose his election at the polls, it will not be a very potent factor in deciding the issue. The third term conspirators cannot be frightened with protests, however vigorous their utterance, but they may pay more respect to the certain loss of four or five Republican States in the event of Grant being the candidate for President.

It will require 374 votes to nominate a Republican candidate for President at the Chicago convention and the friends of Grant claim that up to this time they have 198 nominated delegates, as follows: Pennsylvania, 58; New York, 79; Texas, 16; Missouri, 33; and Kentucky, 24. This leaves Grant 176 short of a majority, and the question is, can he get them? All the New England States except New Hampshire have elected their delegates, but none of them are for Grant, and, singularly enough, Blake out of his own State is down to be much weaker than Edmunds, of Vermont. Leaving Illinois out of the question, the Grant men count on New Jersey, with her 18 votes, as well as nine Southern States, as follows: Maryland, 16; Virginia, 22; North Carolina, 24; Georgia, 22; Alabama, 20; Louisiana, 10; Mississippi, 16; Arkansas, 12; Tennessee, 24—making 186 votes, which, with the 188 already instructed, would give him 374, or ten more than enough. If Grant loses New Jersey and one or more Southern States he would still be in the vocative, even if he carries Illinois, which the Blaine men are making a powerful effort to prevent. Republican conventions in three of the Southern States relied on by the friends of Grant, will not be held until the last week in May, so that until that time the third term project and all that the term implies must remain in its present uncertain condition.

ABOUT four months ago an article appeared in the Boston Herald to the effect that Mr. William H. Holland, of Chelsea, had invented a self-moving wheel, which he kept constantly thrown out on the descending and drawn in on the ascending side. Some time since Mr. Holland has made another wheel which will start itself, a model of which has been seen by a number of gentlemen. He is now in process of erecting a wheel which will start itself, with about one hundred pounds power. He has three different experiments, each embracing the principle of perpetual motion, of which he claims to be the inventor.

A machine containing the same principle as the one first above described was constructed by our friend John A. Kroenke, now of Palmdale, California, while he was employed with us on the "Crescent" at Summitville, this county, more than a quarter of a century ago, but as he did not see how the thing could be kept from wearing out, he concluded that the perpetual motion part of it was a delusion and a snare.

CHARLES B. SALTER, Kenble's most useful and efficient lobby agent, is spending his time with some friends in Jersey City, preparatory to his sentence by Judge Pearson on Monday next, and informs a reporter that since he left Philadelphia he has received over a hundred letters from his old constituents, offering him their support for re-election to the Legislature. We have no doubt that Salter's old constituents would delight in sending him back to Harrisburg, but his plea of guilty interposes an impassable barrier to their good intentions.

THE United States frigate Constitution, with provisions and seed potatoes for the relief of Ireland, arrived at Queenstown on Monday last.

—A dispatch from Greenville, S. C., states that the band of negro incendiaries who fired the city nine times last winter, and burned over one-fourth of the town, were Thursday last found guilty. As soon as the verdict was rendered, the Judge pronounced sentence, directing that they should be hanged on June 18. The testimony developed a conspiracy based on plundering and robbing, and supported in criminal minds.

—Mrs. John Driscoll, of Malden, Mass., was arrested on Saturday on the charge of murdering the four-year-old daughter of John Cronan, a neighbor. The body of the child was found Monday morning near the railroad, and it is believed was placed there by the Driscolls after the child had been killed at their home. A hood fast by the child was buried in Driscoll's cellar, and other circumstantial evidence is strong against Mrs. Driscoll.

—The Burlington (Vt.) Herald (Republican) says that the Democrats in that State will find a fight on their hands that it never knew before. The Herald adds: "We should hate tremendously to vote or fight for a man who has been so grossly deceived and whose honesty was never questioned; and a candidate more dangerous to Republican success could not be set up by the Democrats." The Herald editor "it" will Hancock took care was.

—The community of Honeybrook, Chester county, has been thrown into a state of excitement on account of the robbery of a bank, which took place in the most prominent citizens there, on the charge of being concerned in a number of robberies which have occurred there recently. His detection was caused by his wife, who stole a stolen silver dress. Three wagon loads of the stolen property were found on his premises. He has confessed and been held in jail.

—In Waker county, N. C., the wind blew a tree over, leaving quite a hole where the roots had been. In this hole the two little children of Mr. Joseph McCaleb secreted themselves, thinking to play hide and seek, and were not cut off by their father, who was busy cutting off the tree from the root.

—When the job had been accomplished, the stump with the dirt and stones attached flew back into the hole, completely burying the little ones. When taken out the little girl was dead and the boy was badly hurt.

—In the oil regions Georgia Nugent was once killed a head pipe steady by resting his weight upon it. Death in the Gale. TERRIBLE DEVIATION AND LOSS OF LIFE IN MISSOURI. A fearful wind storm struck and nearly annihilated the town of Marshfield, Mo., on Sunday night, and was followed by a fro which added still greater horrors to the scene. Seventy-five persons are reported killed, and about two hundred wounded, while the destruction of property is said to be almost beyond computation. At other points, and notably about six miles south of Springfield, Mo., the tornado was but little less destructive to life and property. Fifty persons being reported killed at latter point alone. Following are the particulars as furnished by a St. Louis telegram of the 19th.
