A MEMORABLE SQUARE .- Speaking of the great square at the intersection of Broad and Market streets, Philadelphia, a venerable piece of ground the history of which runs Mutrow, May 20, 1880. FRIERED MidPinks-In the FURTHARY of last work you were kind enough to hope that I had no prop-erty destroyed by the terrible conflarmation of the 14th inst. Flease accept thanks for your kind hopes, and believe me happy in saving that none of my buildings were destroyed, although at one time they were in a direct line with the approaching wall of flame. A charge in the wind, however, just saved them in the mick of time and when the form had reached within isochoors. It was the most terrible conflagration that has occurred for many a day in the United States, taking into considera-tion the population. It started about 11 o'clock in the crediting shore of Mutray, Dongal & Co.'s car-works, and by 2 o'clock the best portion of the torm was a mass of charred rules, nothing remain-ing in the track of the fire except blackkened burgks, as even the stone pavements, which were the pride back fully two centuries past, Forney's Pro-gress of a recent date has this to say of Mr. John Wanamaker and that wonderful monument, to his energy and enterprise, the world-renowned Grand Depot, at 13th and Southeast of the great square is another sugges-tive panel in the panorama of the puissant present : John Wanamaker's Grand Depol. In the centre you have the palace of the modern municipality ; in the northwest corner the gignatic hotel in pro-cess of construction by corporate sagacity ; in the southeast the startling monument of individual daring and confidence. These tripartite finite of the age are not often typlfied in so small a space. Art in railroads, art in architecture, art in tride, are rarely so signally symbolized. In John Wan-amaker's example you have the case that springs from system, the comfort that conces from order, the labor wrought by machinery, the tremenious rewards of mathematical accuracy. Science is the proceeds from science is more subline and all con-quering than the matchless success in the increase of hingan happiness and the diminution of hungan Southeast of the great square is another sugge as even the stone pavements, which were the prids of the town, were all burned and shattered to frag ments, while sewers in the street, many of which were at wood and covered with perhaps six inches of earth, were completely reduced to ashes. The flames, fauned by the wind, would shoot along the writed hither and thither, lighting a whole street at the rame line. A getticment is us assumin-ance loft his place of business and wort to render what all he could to his in their, whose house was in close proximity to where the fore started, but the wind being in her twor he returned to the store only to find it descript, and fitty thousand follars worth of merchandlas being consumed before his eyes. proceeds from science is more sublime and all con-quering than the instehless success in the increase of human happiness and the dimension of human toll. In thist sense Mr. Wanaimker's Grand De-pot is a great scheme. Seventy years ago, the Conceiting a wagons, on their way to Pittsburg along the great pike, travelled built a centary before the Cumberland road was opened by the Green Gov-ernment, and when that noble highway was the chiel pith, to what was the Great West, limited by the Ohio River, these same Consettory wagons stopped in Centre Square, opposite the shot now filled by John Wammaker scatterinson. A white canvas was stretched like a great targatiling over the how of the wagons to protect the mode inside from inclement weather. And not entrequently a wife and children made part of the cargo. These wagons cartiod all the dry goods to the troutiers, the proceeties and the home-hold utensith, and it was a long, long journey. Well do I remember them in my native town as they passal along the durity streets in a simular and ground their way through the frozen streets in winter, every horse similing his coronal of belies, the long whip of the stalwart driver making the air cohe with his rapid exclusions. How littered from the contents of the great trains now sent out from the contents of the great trains now sent out from the contents of the stalwart driver making the air cohe with his rapid exclusions. For instance, one man who kept a store and tinwarr store gathered all the valuations to could gravp and put them into the overs of the cook stores - even taking the gold watch from his wins and putring it in for saliety. Still another, an old bacterior sho always prided himself on his fishing tackle, in looking for valu-bles enized a book of trout files from a private re-cess, and lot his wallet hay with several hundred dollars in it.
