THE NATIONAL HOLIDAY IN EBENSBURG. By common consent our national holiday was celebrated here, though in a somewhat informal manner, on Saturday last, instead of the following Monday, which by law is the declared legal holiday, when banking and similar lines of business must be temporarily abandoned. It was a happy chance, too, that our choice fell on the first-mentioned day, for it was cool and pleasant through-out; whereas rain fell almost incessantly all Monday, thereby spoiling many brilliant deviations for celebrations in other localities. Three several Sunday-school picnics came off here. The Presbyterians rendez-vonsed in a beautiful grove near Sninkle's dam; the Congregational school in Hughes' grove, one mile north of town, while the Disciples cast their lines in a grove immediately westward. This time the jaunt was to Watkins' Glen, Seneca Lake, Penn Yan, Kenka Lake, and Hammondsport, all of which may be found on the map of New York State, and the greater part of last week was occupied in making the excursion, in which about two hundred and sixty persons of both sexes and nearly all sizes indelged. From the various points of the compass came the editors and their wives, sweethearts, children, etc., the entire party concentrating at Williamsport, which city most of the number reached, by way of Harrisburg, on Monday evening. Others, however, being more dila-tory in their movements, did not get to Williamsport until Tuesday morning, among the latter of whom ourself, wife and an Altoona friend who accompanied us are to be numbered. Nevertheless, we got there in good time, and had the gratification of meeting our young towasman, R. H. Thompson, and directing the excursionists as to the way they should go to reach the dining room of the Parke House, one of the finest hotels in the United States, and certainly none the less deserving of its good name because our friend Bob belongs to its clerical force. After indulging in a good breakfast, the assembled multitude was marshalled by Mr.

R. S. Menamin, Secretary and Treasurer of the Association, to whose efficiency, good udgment and untiring energy the pleasures of this as of all preceding excursions were eminently due. The multitude, as we have said, was marshalled by Mr. Menamin, under whose direction the excursionists were soon comfortably seated in a special train, kindly furnished by the P. R. R. Co., and steaming away in the direction of Watkins' Gien, which place was reached, after passing through the beautiful city of Elmira and other points of interest, between 1 and 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Here a portion of the party was quartered at the Glen Mountain House, which occupies an elevated position about one mile above the mouth of the glen, where it commands a gorge-ous view of the depths beneath, while the others were assigned to the Glen Park House, which is located near the foot of the glen, and is said by those who had the pleasure of enjoying its hospitality to be one of the best conducted, as it certainly is one of the largest and most beautifully embowered hotels to be found anywhere. As for ourself and party, we were consigned to the Glen Mountreatment and enjoyed its wild and pictor-esque surroundings to our heart's content, afbeit the effort to reach the house by a one horse conveyance up an exceedingly steep acclivity was so far from being a success that when the vehicle began to progress nackward, which it did before half the dis tance had been attained, the occupants of the carriage got out of conceit with the outook and then got out on the dusty road and

What we found to excite our wonder and admiration in Havana Glen it would not be possible in this brief and hastily-written sketch to fully describe, though it is but simple justice to say that while it is probably not much more than one-third the length of Walkins' Glen, it need not take a back seat in the matter of gorge-ous depths, perpendicular hights, beautiful waterfalls, romantic acclivities, secluded nooks, crystal pools, shimmering cascades, tortuous paths, rustic bridges, wind-ing staircases, and all that sort of thing. In fact, to visit that wonderful region and not take a stroll through Havana Glen and feast your eyes on such magnificent works of na-ture as Eagle Cliff Palls, Council Chamber, Curtain Cascade, Bridal Vell, Whispering Falls, Echo Falls, Fairy Cascade, &c., is to miss a rare treat which no lover of nature can fail to appreciate, notwithstanding the climb-ate is exceedingly ranged. A JOLLY JOURNALISTIC JAUNT .- For the so far as we are aware, which occurred to cast even a momentary shadow across the pleasant pathway of the editorial excursionists. For the facts connected with Mrs. Mc-Lean's narrow escape from death we are indebted to the overfoyed couple, with whom we spent a very pleasant hour on the way back to Elmira, where they changed cars for Niagara Falls. From Havana Glen most of the excursionits returned in time to enjoy a very pleasant ride of a couple of hours du-ration on Lake Seneca, for which delightful trip those who participated, and we were not of the number, are under special obligations to J. D. Payne, Esq., Superintendent of the Seneca Lake Steam Navigation Company, who very kindly and considerately detailed one of the largest, handsomest and staunchest boats of the line for that duty.

At 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon the journalistic jaunters sat down with their lady and gentlemen friends, among whom were a nomber of invited guests, to a sumptuous ban-quet at the Glen Mountain House, and it is needless to say that of all the gorges in all the glens there was no gorge so overpoweringly gorge-ous as the universal gorge which was plainly visible on that occasion. After this really royal feast was ended the flow of soul began with a neat and becoming speed from the President of the Association, Clay ton McMichael, Esq., of the Philad'a North American, who was followed in a very humorous and happy strain by Brother Kennedy, of the Pottsville Chronicle. Several other oasts were also dra-no, announced-and responded to in a manner equally felicitous by those to whom the tasks were assigned, but as we were anxious to turn our face home the earth, we didn't wait to bear it out. We are confident, however, that all the speakers acquitted themselves creditably, though we couldn't belp agreeing with D. M. Zimmerman, Esq., Secretary and Treasurer of the Camden and Atlantic City Rail Road, who was one of the excursionists, and is, by the way, as pleasant a gentleman as we have ever me,, and who remarked upon rejoining us at the railroad station, whither he hastened just in time to escape responding to the toast, "The Railroads of Our Councy," for which he was down on the bills, that it was a mis ike to assign to a resident of the place, Mr. Fred. Watkins' Glen, July 1st, 1880 : Watkins' Glen, July 1st, 1880:

In every relation incident to this life, whether of a business or social character, scaking to accomplish our purposes as individuals or in associated bodies, we are constantly dependent upon the kindness, the disposition and the ability of those around us. By seeking enjoyment which begins and ends in ourselves, or thriving by the thrift that is within our control, we remain stand and poor indeed. By bottoming of the pleasure and prosperity around us, and lending of the about ance that has recumulated under the influence of such mutual genial hospitality, we make ourselves and the world a better and happier people. American running borses were very inferior to theirs, but during the last two years Parole, Wallenstein, and other fast ones that were sent from this country to England have such Americans as the Messrs, Lorillard, James Gordon Bennett, &c. The Englishmen have investigated the reasons for the great success of American borses, and find that they are kept in such fine condition by the constant use of M. B. Roberts' Horse Powders. POETICAL CONTRIBUTIONS. AT EVENING IN LORETTO.

The robin sings from garden-tree, As homeward wonds the busy bee; And merry voices laugh in glee. At even in Loretto.

The chickens seek the stable high. The chattering birdles homeward fly: And mothers sing the lullaby At even in Loretto. Across the dale, from College hill, A hum the summer, air doth fill, Ablending with the robin's trill, At even in Loretto.

For o'er the valley, in the west, The monastery, in shadows drest, Stands prendly up upon the crest Or hills around Loretto. And high above, the stender meon, Suspended o'er the quiet town, Shels misty light in beauty down, At even in Loretto.

The stars peep twinkling from the sky. The beetle, humming, wanders by: And from the fields the erickets cry At even in Loretto.

The vesper bell the air doth thrill. And far-off thoughts the mind doth fill, Which frame the spirit, calm and still. At even in Locatio. The kine in lanes do ruminate.

Or stand for milking at the gate, Or on their wonted meal await, At even in Loretto. And as the night holds on her way, The little children kneel and pray, The creed and catechism say, At even in Loretto.

Now night hath drawn a dusky veil O'er village, hill, and lowly vale; O'er convent, too, where, sad and pale. Dwell Sisters at Loretto.

Let not discordant vice envy, Or neighbor fellow man decry; For peace from such will surely fly At even in Lorette. But with the peaceful eve fall in, And fly the wrath and hate of sin; Then you will feel all right within. At even in Loretto. A. D. B.

IN MEMORIAM. J. R .- Oktif June 13, 1880. Toll ! toll ! toll ! Toll forth young and sweet; Brushing the dew from life's opening flowers, With steadfast and willing feet.

Flinging the portals wide
To duty and love's endeavor.
Some chance turned her footsteps aside
Into the unknown forever.

The bride of a few brief years Joy's cup had but touched her lips; Her sun had not reached its meridian spheres Ere it suffered a total eclipse.

Though brief, her life was complete; It had done for her all that life may It had made her for angelhood meet— And why should the Master delay?

Toll ! toll ! toll ! Not for the lost, so dear: She has no need for knoll or dole— But toll for the grief-stricken here. Our eyes are blinded by tears, Striving to see, in vain, brough the vista of desolate years The beneficent uses of pain. But still in the night of our woe Does faith's steadfast whisper spawell; "Tis the hand of our Father, we know, And all that He doeth is well. Ebensburg, June, 1880.
