THE HEAD OF THE NATION.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT PRESIDENTS AND THE PRESIDENCY.

Forty-five millions of people, more or less, are now talking about Presidents and the Presidency; and it is not out of place to give some interesting facts, historical and constitutional, in connection therewith.

To begin, then, the word President, derived from the Latin, means to "sit before"—i. e., an audience. The free translation of the term would be "chairman." And the office of a chairman is to act as presiding officer or moderator of an assemblage.

The President of the United States holds his office for four years. He must be a native of the United States, and at least thirty-five years of age.

He is not elected by the popular vote, but by a College of Electors chosen by the people. Buchanan's popular vote was about 200,000 less than half the total cast; Lincoln's about 800,000 less than half; and Hayes was 150,000 votes behind the number cast for Tilden.

From 1789 to 1824 the President was, in most cases, chosen by the legislature of the States.

The title at first conferred upon the President was "His Highness the President of the United States and Protector of our Liberties." After a while it was discontinued.

The President receives a salary of $50,000 a year, with the White House as a residence free of charge, and light, fuel and attendants thrown in.

Under the original provisions of the Constitution the person having the second highest number of votes for President became Vice-President.

By arrangement two men of directly opposite political views might, and, in fact, did, become elected to the offices of President and Vice-President in the same administration.

The Presidents of the United States, from the adoption of the Constitution to the present, have been as follows:

George Washington, 1789 to 1798.
John Adams, 1797 to 1801.
Thomas Jefferson, 1801 to 1809.
James Madison, 1809 to 1817.
James Monroe, 1817 to 1825.
John Quincy Adams, 1825 to 1829.
Andrew Jackson, 1829 to 1837.
Martin Van Buren, 1837 to 1841.
William Henry Harrison, 1841, when he died, and was succeeded by John Tyler, the Vice-President, who held office till 1845.
James Knox Polk, 1845 to 1849.
Zachary Taylor, 1849 to July 5, 1850, when he died, and was succeeded by Millard Fillmore, the Vice-President, who held office till 1853.
Franklin Pierce, 1853 to 1857.
James Buchanan, 1857 to 1861.
Abraham Lincoln, 1861 to April 15, 1865, when he died, and was succeeded by Andrew Johnston, the Vice-President, who held office till 1869.
Ulysses S. Grant, 1869 to 1877.
Rutherford B. Hayes, from 1877 to 1881.

Nineteen Presidents in all, from the close of the provisional government till the present.

According to the Constitution, the President and Vice-President cannot be chosen from the same State.

Of the nineteen Presidents, seven came from Virginia—Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Harrison, Tyler, and Taylor; two from Massachusetts—John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams; one from New York—Van Buren; one from New Hampshire—Pierce; one from Maryland—Fillmore; three from Tennessee—Jackson, Polk, and Johnson; two from Illinois—Lincoln and Grant; one from Pennsylvania—Buchanan, and one from Ohio—Hayes.

On his renomination for a second term the total electoral vote was increased by the accession of new States to 175, of which number Washington received 132.

John Adams, who was the next President in succession to Washington, received seventy-one votes out of a total of 138.

In the fourth Presidential contest Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr received seventy-three votes each. The result being a tie, there was, of course, no election, and the choice of President devolved upon the House of Representatives, which elected Jefferson by a vote of ten to four—Delaware and North Carolina not voting.

The electoral college also failed to elect in the tenth Presidential contest. The total number of votes was 294. Of these Andrew Jackson received ninety-nine, John Q. Adams eighty-four, William H. Crawford forty-one and Henry Clay thirty-seven. The House elected Jackson.

In 1856 the Democrats elected their last President, James Buchanan, and the Republicans put in the field its first candidate, John C. Fremont.

That same year—1856—what was known as the Know-Nothing movement had acquired considerable strength, and the American party put in the field Millard Fillmore. He received only the eight electoral votes of his own State—Maryland.

During the Presidential election of 1864, eleven States—all Southern—did not vote.

Of the nineteen Presidents, ten have been soldiers and nine lawyers.

Of the six candidates now running for the office of President and Vice President five are Generals and one is a banker.

AN INTELLIGENT DONKEY.—It has often been remarked by experienced naturalists that human being have little conception of the marvellous sagacity existing in dumb animals when they are encouraged by consistent kindness on the part of the masters to display it. For instance, the Little Folks' Magazine relates that a Spanish peasant living in the suburbs of Madridthas had long been in the habit of repairing daily to the city, accompanied by a donkey laden with milk for distribution among certain customers. One day, however, the master was taken ill, whereupon his wife suggested that the ass should be sent on his customary journey alone. The panniers were accordingly filled with cans of milk as usual, and a bit of paper was attached to the donkey's headstall, requesting the customers to help themselves to their ordinary allowance of milk, and to put back the cans into the pannier. Off started the donkey, and returned in due course with the cans empty and with everything in order. The master found upon inquiry that the trusty messenger had called at the right doors without missing one, and also that in some instances he had pulled the bell with his teeth when kept waiting. From that day forward the donkey has gone his rounds alone, and it may be presumed that his arrival at a certain definite hour is counted on by each customer, just as in England, forty or fifty years ago, the inhabitants of country villages regulated their clocks and watches by the mail coaches which ran past their doors with unfailing punctuality. The story speaks well for the sagacity of the donkey, and also for the proverbial honesty of the lower orders in Spain, among whom acts of petty larceny are as much unknown as in the Scottish Highlands, or in the west of Ireland.

THE GREENSTOWN Telegraph suggests that our agricultural societies, which give so many and high premiums for fast trotting horses, might at least spare a little for the encouragement of the food which the noble animal is to eat. Premiums for well grown hay, clean hay, hay from improved grasses and well-managed hay-fields, it thinks, would surely be objects worthy of the attention of even a "State Agricultural Society."
