Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often, though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

A MAN WITH A MERMAID.

Mr. Charles A. Doyle is a San Franciscan, lately returned from Japan. He is registered at the Lindell Hotel at Yokohoma, and in addition to the interest that attaches to him, owing to the strange country he hails from, he enjoys the further distinction of being known as "the man with a mermaid."

Those who have seen the old-time geography illustration, which has recently been used as a trademark for a certain patent hair restorative and which represents the mermaid rising from the sea and combing her long locks with one hand while in the other she holds a small looking glass, can recall this picture and thereby form an idea of what the present monstrosity looks like, barring, however, the beauty, which is a distinguished trait of the ideal mermaid. Mr. Doyle's strange curiosity is half human, half fish. The head, chest, abdomen and arms are unmistakably human, but from the abdomen down the creature is a fish, scaly, finny and formed like the extremities of a dweller in the water. The arms are covered with scales to the wrist, and the backs of the small hands have the same scaly, covering to the finger tips. The head is small as that of a baby, but is perfect in every detail; the forehead does not recede, but is high and straight and is of the class that indicates an unusual degree of intelligence. The eyes are soft, swimmy and lightless as those of the fish; but the mouth, the ears, the nose, and in fact all the other features, are pronounced human, regular, clear cut, and as perfect as a beautiful woman's face. A light covering of brown hair, several inches in length and eyebrows of the same color, are the only hirsute appendages. The spinal column is clearly seen running up to the base of the skull and falling down the back until it is lost in the fishy extremity. Ten ribs are easily counted upon the breast, and the mamalian female development for feeding the young is readily discernible. The mermaid measures almost three feet from the crown of the head to the extremity of the caudal fin, and is said to be larger than the only other specimen of the kind ever seen in this country. The other mermaid is now on exhibition in the New York Aquarium, and attracts a great deal of attention from scientists as well as from the general public.

Mr. Doyle is very proud of his mermaid, and, although a great many attempts have been made to induce him to sell the curious creature, he has thus far refused to part with her. He says the monstrosity has been subjected to the closest scrutiny by scientists of the Pacific slope, all of whom have pronounced her the most wonderful natural phenomenon ever brought to their notice, and have concurred in declaring mermaids no longer myths. The curiosity was captured two years ago by three fishermen, near Urishaha, in the great inland sea. They had seen her many times and had made many attempts to capture her, and succeeded in taking her after the most persistent efforts. When taken she was placed in the museum at Tokio, Japan, at the extravagant figure of 5,000 sats, or dollars. The purchase was made to satisfy a sudden desire to possess the strange creature and Mr. Doyle does not known what special advantage he enjoys in being one of the very few men who own a mermaid.—St. Louis Democrat.

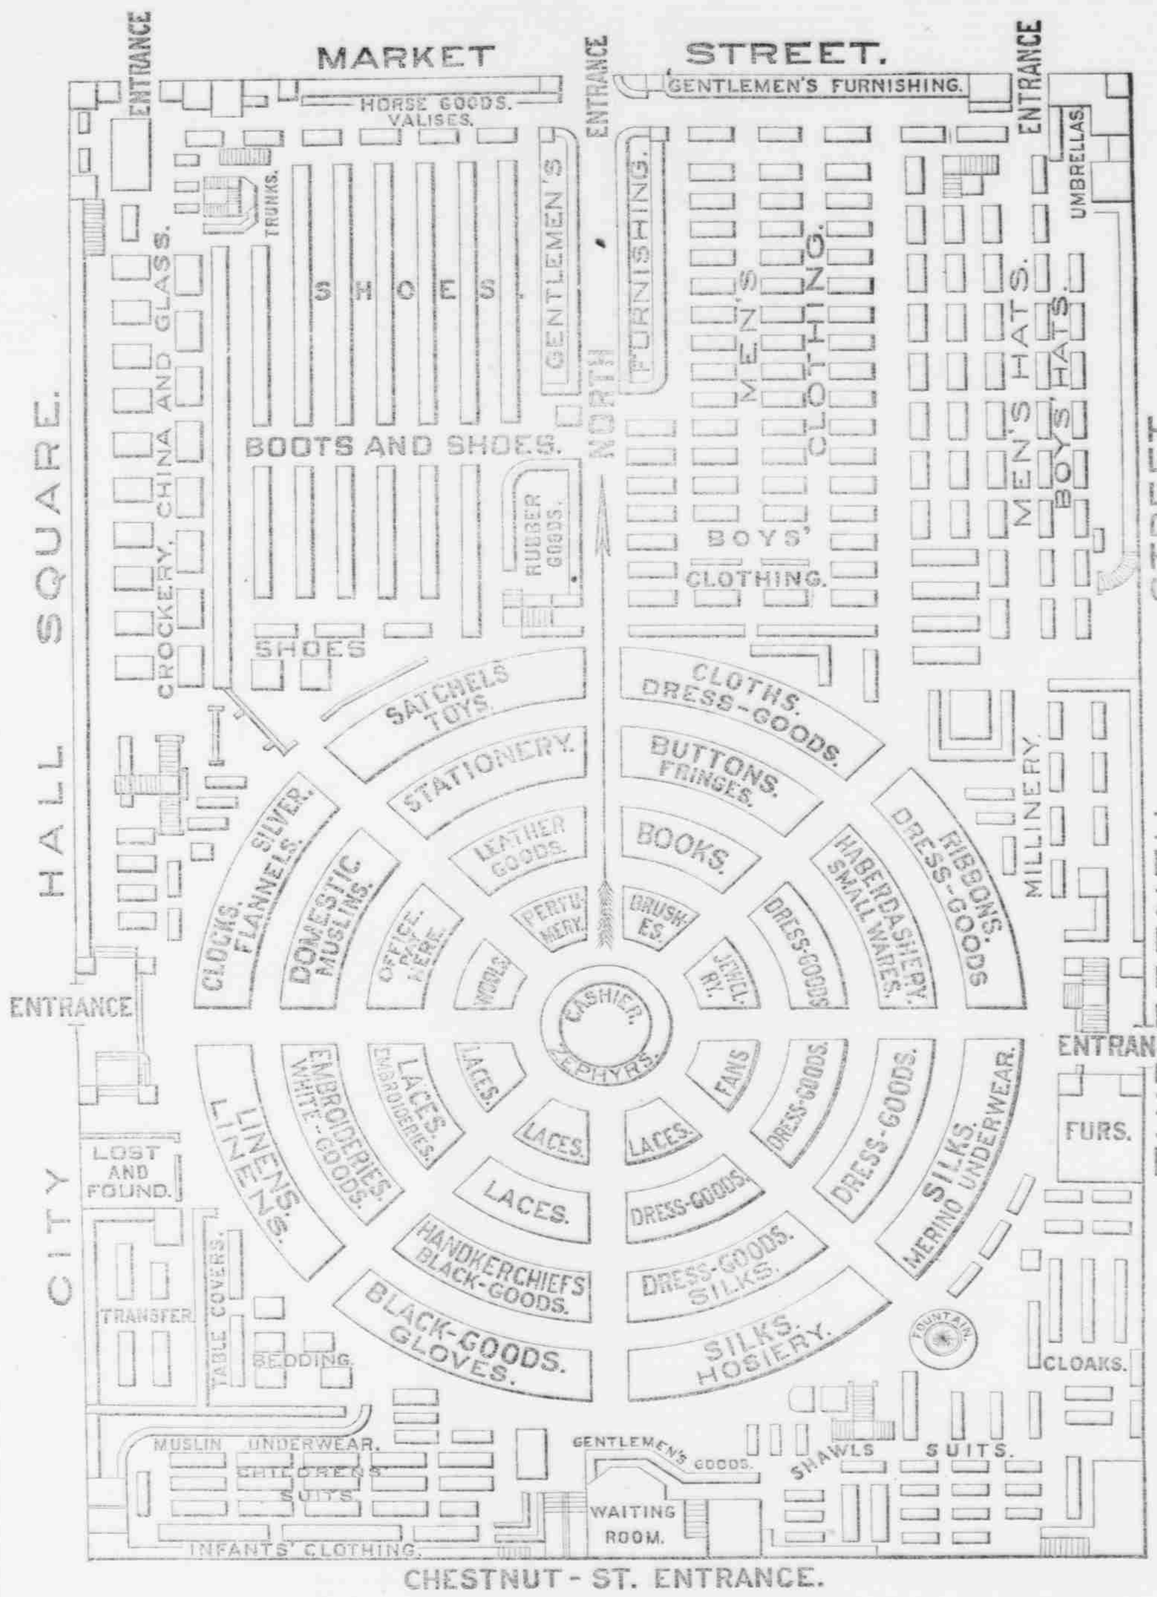
INHERITED ANTIPATHIES.—Cows hate dogs instinctively from their calf-hood upward. I used to doubt once upon a time whether the hatred was not of artificial origin, and wholly induced by the inveterate human habit of egging on every dog to worry every other animal that comes in its way. But I tried a mild experiment one day by putting a half-grown town-bred puppy into a small inclosure with some hitherto unworried calves, and they all turned to make a common headway against the intruder with the same striking unanimity as the most ancient and experienced cows. Hence I am inclined to suspect that the antipathy does actually result from a vaguely-inherited instinct derived from the days when the ancestor of our kine was a wild urus, and the ancestor of our dogs a wolf, on the forest-clad plains of Central Europe. When a cow puts up its tail at the sight of a dog entering its paddock, as at the present day, it has probably some dim, instinctive consciousness that it stands in the presence of a dangerous, hereditary foe; and as the wolves could only seize with safety a single isolated cow, so the cows usually make common cause against the intruding dog, turning their heads in one direction with very unwonted unanimity till his tail finally disappears under the opposite gate.

Such inherited antipathies seem common and natural enough. Every species knows and dreads the ordinary enemies of its race. Mice scamper away from the very smell of a cat. Young chickens run to the shelter of their mother's wings when the shadow of a hawk passes over their heads. Mr. Darwin put a small snake into a paper bag, which he gave to the monkeys at the Zoo; and one monkey after another opened the bag, looked in upon the deadly foe of the quadrumanous kind, and promptly dropped the whole package with every gesture of horror and dismay. Even man himself—though his instincts have all weakened so greatly with the growth of his more mere plastic intelligence, adapted to a wider and more modifiable set of external circumstances—seems to retain a vague and original terror of the serpentine form.—St. James Gazette.

MANY a father makes a grave mistake in not getting acquainted with his sons. The mother usually knows her daughters much better, and is in more cordial sympathy with them. If young men were taken more fully into the confidence of their fathers, and made their companions at home and abroad, in all pastimes and amusements, it would be abundantly better for both. Fathers, if you do not know your boys see, about it at once. If you do not somebody else will. Fathers and mothers rarely make any mistake in cultivating the confidence and affection of their children. If they deny any reasonable request more pains should be taken to explain to the children than if they were strangers. A parent should never cease to be polite to children. While they have a right to order and be obeyed, a kind request and "I thank you" will nine times out of ten accomplish the same far more effectually. The earliest lessons at home, taken from the father and mother, fix the status of the man and woman in the future in a thousand things that will tell for good or ill. The most beautiful scene on this earth is a well ordered home, where every wheel is turned by love, and where every member vies with the other in contributing most to the happiness of the others. Of such homes we cannot have too many, and their influence for good cannot be over-estimated.

HOW TO CURE A SORE THROAT.—One who has tried communicates the following about curing sore throats: Let each one of your readers buy at any drug store one ounce of camphorated oil and five cents' worth of chlorate of potash. When any soreness appears in the throat put the potash in a half tumbler of water, and with it gargle the throat thoroughly and rub with the camphorated oil at night before going to bed and also pin around the throat a small strip of woolen flannel. This is a simple, cheap and sure remedy.

GROUND PLAN OF
JOHN WANAMAKER'S STORE.



THE STORE AND THE TRADE.

A study of this ground plan, incomplete as it is, will give you a better idea of the store, and of what is in it, than description can do. The store covers 2¼ acres; a basement is under, and galleries are over, a part. The whole affords somewhere about 5 acres of room.

This particular business is 4 years old; it began in 1876 with clothing; in 1877 it became a general store with such goods as you see in the plan, with carpets, upholstery, furniture, and kitchen-furnishing up-stairs. Since that time gallery after gallery has been added: and there is not an inch of room to spare anywhere. To the surprise of many, it has flourished while trade was languishing almost everywhere else.

To us there is no mystery about it: nothing surprising even; unless it be surprising that so conspicuous a business should ever be misunderstood. We do nothing more than simply to provide facilities for your getting what you want.

We don't mean to say that other facilities are not provided for distributing goods: but that's a different thing. We provide so that you get what you want, exactly what you want! In the first place we've got it. In the second place we send it. And if we send you the wrong thing, or if you think the charge is too much, you bundle it back to us.

We tell of these things in the newspapers, because there are thousands of you who don't know what we are doing: thousands of you don't know the character of the stock that fills these 5 acres; thousands of you who, therefore, buy where you pay more money.

We are every merchant's fair and open competitor. We do not expect to gather millions of trade from all over the country without meeting opposition and misrepresentation. Some will believe whatever is said against us. The only answer we make is: Send back whatever you don't want at the price.

We want your trade. You want our goods; or would want them, if you knew. No matter how far away you may be; you will do well to send to us for some things. We ask you to write to us about something you have present occasion for.

When we get in communication with you, we shall have one means of winning your trade, viz., by pleasing you. When we have won it, we shall have one means of keeping it, viz., by dealing with you as we deal with everybody: giving you large return for your money, and supplying your wants so intelligently that you will write us for what you want as naturally as you say "good morning" to your next-door neighbor.

THE WILD HOG OF INDIA.

Those who have formed their conception of pig exclusively upon the tame pig of the civilized sty, have no adequate idea of the free wild pig of the Indian jungle. Like the North American Indian, the pig is debased by contact with civilization. He becomes cowardly, weak, dirty, and a prey to an inordinate thirst for swill. The distance between the tame Indian of Saratoga, who steals chickens and wallows drunken in the gutter, and the fierce warrior of the Western plains is not greater than that which separates the despised pig of civilization from the wild and fearless quarry of the East Indian pig-sticker. The latter pig, whose spirit has never been broken with pig yoke, and whose moral nature has never been poisoned with swill, is one of the bravest inhabitants of the jungle, and has been known to attack and put to route the majestic elephant and ferocious tiger.

The full name of the East Indian pig is Sus indicus, though no one except a punctilious scientific person ever calls him by it. Among beginners in the art of pig-sticking he is sometimes magniloquently described as a wild boar, though he is very often a wild sow; but pig-stickers of reputation uniformly call him a pig or hog. Sus indicus often grows to the length of 4 feet and 8 and 10 inches, and reaches the height of 3 feet, or even 40 inches, at the shoulder. When full grown his strength is enormous, and in speed he will sometimes rival the fastest American horse. He enters upon existence in a striped state; subsequently he becomes brown; when in the prime of life he affects a dingy-black color, and when old he is gray and grizzled. At no period can he be honestly called a handsome or a graceful animal; but his courage and tenacity in life demand our respect.

In the point of teeth the tame pig has sadly deteriorated. The wild boar of India, which is the type of the barbarie pig of all ages, is armed with long semi-circular tusks. Those in the lower jaw sometimes attain the length of eight or nine inches. They curve outward and upward, and the edges are kept sharp by the pig's constant habit of smiting them against the tusks of the upper jaw. The swiftness and power with which he uses those tusks to carve an enemy are almost incredible. A hunting dog is frequently cut nearly in two by a single stroke of a boar's tusks, and horses and men are often fatally killed by boars which have become tired of being hunted, and which try to infuse a little variety into the affair by hunting their enemies. When wounded he is an exceedingly dangerous beast to face on foot, unless the hunter is a lawless ruffian who is capable of killing him with a rifle. One can scarcely imagine an Englishman so lost to all sense of decency as to shoot a fox, and next to that crime ranks in Anglo-Indian estimation the loathsome outrage of killing a pig by any process except that of pig-sticking.

CROWS BEHAVING LIKE HAWKS.—In this part of the country heretofore the crow has been associated with cornfields and not with chickens, but the report now comes from Flushing, L. I., that crows have developed bold and rapacious qualities and make repeated onslaughts on the barnyards of that neighborhood. This is a thing never before heard of in Flushing, and it has caused consternation among the housewives whose chickens have been taken.

Mrs. Flanagan early in the season had 350 chickens; now she has but 250. Although she does not think that all of the missing 100 were carried away by the crows, yet she has repeatedly seen crows take the chickens, and thinks that many of them were lost in that way. The crows, she says, use much strategy in their movements. At times two will visit the yard together, one mounting guard while the other reconnoitres. If any enemy appears, the guard gives warning in a wild screech. Some of the crows are remarkably bold. They will perch on the trees close to the house, nodding their heads in the most unconcerned manner. Scarecrows are of no avail. Nothing less than the throwing of some missile suffices to drive them away.

One woman thought it so novel a sight to see a crow pick up a chicken that instead of frightening him away she allowed him to make off with the prize. The birds are most numerous in the morning and evening. One man made an attempt to get rid of them by standing himself in the yard with a gun. As a rearguard he was a success, but as to killing any of the birds he could accomplish nothing. During this season more crows have been seen on Long Island than for many years. The new characteristic which some of them seem to have developed might be explained by the fact that they find it difficult to obtain the usual supply of corn on account of their own increase and the severe ravages of the army worm during the summer. They are thus compelled to have recourse to the small fowl.

MONKEY, DOG AND RATS.—A London paper of recent date gives the following particulars of an extraordinary match at rat killing:

"Hollinwood, near Manchester, was the scene of a rather novel rat killing match the other day, between Mr. Benson's fox terrier dog, Turk, and a Mr. Lewis' monkey, for £5. The conditions of the match were that each one had to kill twelve rats, and the one that finished them the quickest to be declared the winner. You may guess what excitement this would cause in the 'doggy' circle. It was agreed that Turk was to finish his twelve rats first, which he did and in good time, too, many bets being made on the dog after he had finished them. After a few minutes had elapsed it now became the monkey's turn, and a commotion it caused. Time being called, the monkey was immediately put to his twelve rats, Mr. Lewis, the owner, at the same time putting his hand in his coat pocket and handing the monkey a peculiar hammer. This was a surprise to the onlookers; but the monkey was not long in getting to work with his hammer, and, once at work, he was not long in completing the task set before him. You may talk about a dog being quick at rat-killing, but he is really not in it with the monkey and his hammer. Had the monkey been left in the ring much longer you could not have told that his victims had been rats at all—he was for leaving them in all shapes. Suffice it to say the monkey won with ease, having time to spare at the finish. Most persons present (including Mr. Benson, the owner of the dog) thought the monkey would worry the rats in the same manner as a dog does; but the conditions said kill, and the monkey killed with a vengeance, and won the £5, besides a lot of bets for his owner."

NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.—A very simple relief for neuralgia is to boil a small handful of lobelia in half a pint of water till the strength is out of the herb, then strain it off and add a teaspoonful of fine salt. Wring cloths out of the liquid as hot as possible, and spread over the part effected. It acts like a charm. Change the cloths as soon as cold till the pain is all gone; then cover the place with a soft, dry covering till all perspiration is over, so as to prevent taking cold. Rheumatism can often be relieved by application to the painful parts of cloths wet in a weak solution of sal-soda in water. If there is inflammation in the joints, the cure is very quick; the wash needs to be lukewarm.

CRACKS in stoves may be effectually stopped by a paste made of ashes and salt mixed with water.

Meets the requirements of the rational medical philosophy which at present prevails. It is a perfectly pure vegetable remedy, embracing the most important properties of a preventive, a tonic, and an alterative. It fortifies the body against disease, invigorates and revitalizes the torpid system, and effects a most salutary change in the digestive organs, when in a morbid condition. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.
