(The original and only genuine Chinese Cream Camphor manufactured.—WONG SUE KEE & CO., Tea & Exchange, 846 South Second street, Philadelphia, Pa.)

Chinese Cream CAMPHOR!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR THE RELIEF OF PAIN IN MAN AND BEAST!

Commands the attention of all who have been inveterate sufferers of RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, HEADACHE, BACKACHE, FROSTED FEET, STIFF JOINTS, and all pains in every portion of the body. The seat of pain is reached by exciting the pores to action, thus enabling the curative properties of the CHINESE CREAM CAMPHOR to enter, which allies the pain as soon as the affected parts are reached. The liniment must, upon each application, be rubbed in thoroughly; and in cases of Rheumatism of long standing it should be used three or four times a day, and four applications made each time, until cured. Care, however, should be exercised after the pores are opened, to prevent taking cold.

FOR HORSES

Chinese CREAM Camphor IS INVALUABLE.

It relieves Sprained Joints, Thrush in Feet, Sweeny, Poll Evil, Blood and Bone Spavins, Ringbone, and all hard lumps caused by kicks or other bruises. For Epizooty, Distemper, Fever, Colic, Loss of Appetite, and Weakness, use the IRON HORSE AND CATTLE POWDER.

☞ A half-pint bottle of the CHINESE CREAM CAMPHOR can be had for 50 cents from E. J. CASE, Lewistown, Pennsylvania, Pa.

N. B.—The testimonials of persons using this preparation, either on themselves or their horses, will be thankfully received.

TESTIMONIALS.

I have tried the Chinese Cream Camphor for Rheumatism and Nervous Headache, and have found in it instant relief. I have never found its equal in all my travels.—Ebenezer Byles, London, Eng., late of Capt. 8th Geo. Hyde, R. E. N., Bombay, India.

I used the Chinese Cream Camphor for a severe attack of Rheumatism in the right shoulder, and can state truly and honestly that I received relief. well-known remedies, that it is the best thing I ever used, curing me completely.—HILLARD F. WARNER, 117 N. 4th street, West Philadelphia, March 1, 1881.

After many applications of the Chinese Cream Camphor I was relieved of frosted feet.—NATHAN EARP, North Third street, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 12, 1881.

Having suffered severely with frosted feet I used the Chinese Cream Camphor three times, rubbing it in thoroughly, and found perfect relief. I used it for nervous headache, obtaining instant relief.—ANNIE S. TAYLOR, 1215 Melon street, Philada. Jan. 15, 1881. [4-8-6m.]

THE NEWFOUNDLAND DOG.

This powerful, intelligent, and docile animal, which in its unmixed state is perhaps the noblest of the canine tribe, is a native of the country the name of which it bears, and may be considered as a distinct race. Its introduction into this country is of comparatively recent date; and the fine animal known to us by the name of Newfoundland dog is only half-breed, and of size inferior to the dog in its native state, when it measures about six feet and a half from the nose to the extremity of the tail, the length of which is two feet. In its own country it only barks when greatly irritated, and then with a manifestly painful effort, producing a sound which is described as particularly harsh. Its exemption from hydrophobia in Newfoundland appears to be well authenticated.

The dog is employed by the settlers as a beast of burthen in drawing wood from the interior to the coast. Three or four of them yoked to a sledge will draw two or three hundred-weight of wood with great facility for several miles. In this service they are said to be so sagacious and willing as to need no driver or guide; but having delivered their burden, return without delay to the woods in expectation of receiving some food in recompense for their labor. We see, indeed, in this country, that, from the activity of his disposition, the Newfoundland dog delights in being employed; and the pride of being useful makes him take uncommon pleasure in carrying in his mouth for miles baskets of other articles, of which, as well from that satisfaction as from the fidelity of his character, it would be dangerous for a stranger to dispute possession with him. In many respects he may be considered as a valuable substitute for the mastiff as a house dog; and a dangerous rival to the S. Bernard for the kingship of dogdom.

The Newfoundland dog is easily satisfied in his food. He is fond of fish, whether fresh or dried; and salt meat or fish is more acceptable to him than to most other animals, as well as boiled potatoes and cabbage. When hungry, however, he has not very strong scruples about appropriating such flesh or fish as falls in his way, or even of destroying poultry or sheep. For the blood of the latter animal has much appetite, and sucks it from the throat without feeding on the carcass. This is in strong contrast with the collie or sheep dog, of which we gave the following illustration: A sheep dog in New Mexico, returning one evening with his sheep to the fold, discovered that his master was still in his shanty, and kept very quiet. The next evening it was the same. But after penning up the sheep the dog smelled about the door, scratched, barked, and even howled, as he was getting very hungry, but his master did not move. The dog, true to his appointed duty, went out with the sheep on the third day, but that night when he drove the stock into their pen the last one to attempt to get in became the victim of the dog's appetite. This method of providing for his own wants became a part of the faithful dog's daily duty. Every evening the last sheep to try to enter the fold was seized by him and served for supper and breakfast, and dinner the next day. The ranch to which the dog belonged was in a solitary part of the Territory, and out of the track of travel or visitation. For two years from the time of his master's death—as ascertained by date left by the latter—the faithful dog tended the flock committed to his charge, and had fresh mutton for his supper every night. The flock was not decimated by this steady drain upon its resources. On the contrary, it increased in numbers, and when, at the end of the two years from the time of the death of the proprietor, the ranch was visited, and the remains of the owner found, the dog was still at his post of duty, jealously guarding his flock, and driving them to the best pasture every day and to the fold every night, before which he slept, to keep the wild sheep-eaters of the plains at a civil distance.

It is well known that the Newfoundland dog can swim very fast, dive with ease, and bring things up from the bottom of the water. Other dogs can swim, but not so willingly, or so well.—This superiority he owes to the structure of the foot, which is semi-webbed between the toes; thus presenting an extended surface to press away the water from behind, and then collapsing when it is drawn forward, previous to making the stroke. This property, joined to much courage, and a generous disposition, enables this dog to render those important services in the preservation of endangered life, of which such numerous instances are recorded.

A Newfoundland dog, kept at the ferry-house at Worcester, was famous for having at different periods, saved three persons from drowning; and so fond was he of water, that he seemed to consider any disinclination for it in other dogs as an insult to the species. If a dog was left on the bank by its master, and, in the idea that it would be obliged to follow the boat across the river, which is but narrow, stood yelping at the bottom of the steps, unwilling to take to the water, the Newfoundland setter would go down to him, and with a satirical growl, as if in mockery, take him by the back of the neck, and throw him into the stream.

A native of Germany, fond of traveling, was pursuing his course through Holland, accompanied by a large Newfoundland dog. Walking one evening on a high bank, which formed one side of a drke, or canal, so common in that country, his foot slipped, and being unable to swim he soon became senseless. When he recovered his recollection, he found himself in a cottage on the opposite side of the dike to that from which he had fallen, surrounded by peasants, who had been using the means so generally practiced in that country for restoring animation. The account given by the peasants was, that one of them returning home from his labor, observed at a considerable distance, a large dog in the water swimming and dragging, and sometimes pushing something which he seemed to have great difficulty in supporting, but which at length succeeded in getting into a small creek on the opposite side to that on which the men were.

When the animal had pulled what he had hitherto supported, as far out of the water as he was able, the peasant discovered that it was the body of a man. The dog, having shaken himself, began industriously to lick the hands and face of his master, while the rustic hastened across; having obtained assistance, the body was conveyed to a neighboring house, where the usual means of resuscitation soon restored him to sense and recollection. Two very considerable bruises, with the marks of teeth, appeared on his shoulder, the other on the nape of the neck; whence it was presumed that the faithful animal first seized his master by the shoulder, and swam with him in this manner for some time; but that his sagacity had prompted him to let go his hold, and shift his grasp to the neck, by which he had been enabled to support his head out of the water. It was in the latter position that the peasant observed the dog making his way along the dike, which it appeared he had gone for a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile. It is therefore probable that this gentleman owed his life as much to the sagacity as to the fidelity of his faithful dog.—London Lamp.

IRISH POTATOES.

The Irish potato is so called because it was first extensively cultivated in that country. Sir Robert Southwell, the President of the Royal Society, says that they were introduced there by his grandfather from tubers given him by Sir Walter Raleigh. They are said to have been sent him by the Virginia colonists in 1546, but they must have been obtained by them from the Spanish settlements, as they are not found in Virginir in a wild state. According to the tradition Sir Walter had the roots planted by his gardner, who first tried the taste of the seed in the spring, and was much disgusted thereby; and it was not until the following winter, when he was digging over his garden, that he discovered the value of his acquisition in the roots. There is no doubt that Irish potatoes are natives of South America. They were first brought to Spain from Peru by the Spaniards in the early part of the sixteenth century. In both these countries they were called "papas". From Spain they were carried to Italy, where they received the same name as truffles—"taratrufli." They were sent thence to Vienna in 1598 by the Governor of Mons, and thus became known in northern Europe. Their culture, it is said, was finally introduced into England by the wrecking of a vessel laden with them on the coast of Lancastershire. As the vessel was from Ireland, this may account for the name of Irish potatoes, though it seems to be more extensively used in the United States than in England, in order to distinguish the "Irish" from the "sweet" potato, which is botanically an entirely different plant. In former times the Irish lived principally on animal food, the products of the dairy and the coarse oat-meal or barley bread which is generally used in Northern Europe. Fish were also an important article of food. Hume says that it was not until the reign of Henry VIII, that carrots, turnips or any edible root were produced in England. The few that were used were imported from Holland, and we may reasonably suppose that their introduction into Ireland was of still later date.

LAMB CHOLERA.—An Ohio sheep raiser says: Hundreds of lambs die annually here with this disease; very few flocks escape without the loss of three or four and many lose from 25 to 50 of their number. I think the name cholera is a very improper one for this malady, as only the fleshy lambs are known to die with it. A thin lamb, or one poorly suckled or hand-fed, I have never known to die with the so called lamb cholera. My name for the disease is apoplexy.

It is seldom a remedy can be administered, as the lamb is usually found dead without a premonition of the disease. One I found unwell and administered two ounces of Epsom salts and effected a cure.

I have observed the following treatment with my breeding ewes, and find it a very successful preventative of this lamb disease. Stir as much salt into a half gallon of pine tar as it will take. Smear bottoms of feed troughs with it liberally. Keep them in this condition and give salt in no other way. The lambs will soon learn to lick the tar. Many will be noticed at this before their age for dying with the disease. Feed sulphur, wood ashes and Epsom salts mixed in the feed daily, small quantities. If lambs are already dying, get pine tar, catch each lamb and put the tar well back into the mouth with a small paddle prepared for the purpose; the bulk of a hickory nut is enough. It may purge some or all of them, but they will get all right in a day or two, and no more will die for a while, even if you quit at this.

SWOLLEN TEATS IN A COW.—The teats of cows just now are often badly bitten by flies. The flies frequently come directly from feeding on carrion and other decaying matter, and thus convey injection to parts which they attack and pierce to suck the blood, and causes swellings, sores, or inflamation. The teats and parts of the udder around the teats seem to be particularly favorite points of attack by the flies, perhaps because some of the milk has dried upon these places. A remedy is to wipe off the teats with a cloth dipped in clean water immediately after milking and then to apply a mixture of lard and castor oil in equal parts, with one-fiftieth of the quantity of carbolic acid added to it. This is to be rubbed on the teats and other parts where the flies gather and where the cow cannot relieve herself from them, such as the inside and back of the fore-legs, the throat, brisket and neck.

A CURIOUS SPOT.—Between the mouth of the Mississippi and Galveston, ten or fifteen miles southwest of Sabine Pass, is a spot in the Gulf of Mexico which is commonly called "The Oil Ponds" by the captains of the small craft which ply in that vicinity. There is no land within fifteen miles, but even in the wildest weather the water at this spot is comparatively calm, owing to the thick covering of oil which apparently rises from the bed of the gulf, about eighteen feet below the surface. This strange refuge is well known to the captains of small vessels which trade between Calcasieu, Orange, Sabine Beaumont and Galveston, and when through stress of weather, they fail to make harbor elsewhere, they run for "The Oil Ponds," let go their anchors and ride out the gale in safety.

FARMERS who desire to rid their fields of bushes and brambles should take advantage of the long days in August, when the sap is nearly all out the roots of trees and brambles to cut them off close to the ground. A week's delay because of the pressure of business on the farm, will make it necessary to do the work over again another season. Whereas, if all bushes and brambles were cut off the last week in July or the first week in August, an effectual end will be made of them and thus future trouble avoided. Nothing more mars the beauty of a farm than to see fences and ditch banks lined with hedge rows and bushes, and weeds of unhidden growth. Work now done in this direction is paying and telling work for the farmer.—Ex.

THE benefit which fowls derive from eating charcoal is acknowledged. The method of putting it before them, however, is not well understood. Pounded charcoal is not in the shape in which fowls usually find their food, and consequently is not very enticing to them. Corn burnt on the cob and the refuse, which consists almost entirely of the grains reduced to charcoal and still retaining their perfect shape, if placed before them is greedily eaten by them, and with a marked improvement in their health, as shown by the bright color of their eyes and their sooner production of a greater average of eggs to the flock than before.

TO CURE bunions use pulverized saltpetre and sweet oil. Obtain at a druggist's 5 or 10 cents' worth of saltpetre; put it into a bottle with sufficient olive oil to dissolve it, shake up well and rub the inflamed joints night and morning, and more frequently if painful.

EMPLOY no more quack doctors and quack medicines; rely wholly on PERUNA.

CELEBRATED H. H. H. MEDICINE.

PERSONS afflicted with pains and aches who have never tried the great H. H. H. Medicine do not know its powers in removing pain. Give it a trial for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and particularly Diphtheria. A sure cure for horses suffering with Bone and Blood Spavin, Poll Evil and Colic. Be sure and ask for the H. H. H. Medicine, manufactured by D. P. Tomlinson, Philadelphia, as the popularity of the name has led other parties to put an inferior article on the market bearing the same name. Sold by druggists everywhere. 9-20.-1m.

Kendall's SPAVIN CURE

READ PROOF OF WONDERFUL CURES.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO.—Gentlemen: I feel it my duty to inform you of the wonderful effects of your SPAVIN CURE. I had a valuable mare which had a bad spavin, and was lame for about two years. I used a number of veterinary remedies, but they did not help her. I then purchased a bottle of your SPAVIN CURE, and used it according to directions, and the lameness entirely disappeared. I have since used it in a number of cases in my own stable, and I take pleasure in recommending it to horsemen as the best liniment I have ever used.—JAMES A. WILSON, Editor Blacksmith and Wheelwright, Fairfield, Iowa.
