The baby had ceased his laughing play and had closed his drawsy eyes. The mother threw her eyes toward the cradle to assure herself that all was prepared; at this moment the fire blazed. up suddenly and threw a strong light upon the corner of the bed exposed by the lifted curtain. As Madame Aubrey looked, she almost fell from her chair: under the bed, close to the cradle in which she had been about to deposit her sleeping child, she now beheld two great feet, shod in coarse brogans. In an instant the sense of her situation flashed across the mind of the young woman as if shown by a flash of lightning. This blidden man no doubt was a thief, per haps an assassin. She was alone, without help present or soon to be expected, for her usband was not to return till eight or nine o'clock, and it was now but little past six .-
