About 10 o'clock the Cambria Iron Co. took two locomotives and twenty cars loaded with old rails, ore and stone, and ran them up on their track to prevent other side from going on with their work of destruction. This had the effect of suspending hostilities for a time, when orders were eceived from headquarters in Philadelphia directing the railroad men to withdraw, which they did, and the C. I. Co. men soon followed their example. The origin of the trouble is a fear on the part of the P. R. R. Co. that the Iron Co. was playing into the

Mr. C. offered to pay him back his money and $50 for the use of the amount, but repudiated the other demand avers that when his workmen were taking the forms of the paper to the Republican office, where he did his press work, Huss in-terfered with them and in the altercation that followed the forms were "pied," as printers say, and the type scattered in the Campbell declares he will go straight

Three times within the last few months have the Sisters of St. Joseph, at Mt. Gallitzin Seminary, been subjected to the terror and alarm naturally attending a burglary, or something very much like it. The latest instance of this dastardiv outrage having occurred on last Saturday night, when one of these cowardly sneaks got into the building in some way, but was fortunately frightened away by one of the Sisters before he managed to steal anything more valuable than the key of the main entrance. He is known and is strongly suspected of being concerned in the two previous performances of a similar character. He will be closely watched hereafter. A gentleman of this place, whose business required him to be on the street on Saturday night between 11 and 12 o'clock, during which time the outrage referred to at the Seminary was perpetrated, saw and recognized in the western part of town two va-liant youths at a short distance from him, and as he approached them one jumped over a fence into a garden and the other hid bimelf, as he thought, in the shadow of an adoining house. The circumstance is suspic ions when taken into connection occurred at the Seminary immediately before or just after that hour of the night. conduct is disgraceful beyond language to express, and if another similar visit is made to the convent the depredators may expect a warmer reception than is only too infrequently accorded to such despicable charac-ters, and even as it is exposure and punishnight raid on the premises of the good Sisters

"A great deal has been said about the people of Huntingdon being moved, as never before, by in temperance and the annoyance and shamelessness of excessive drunking, as exhibited here for the last few months. It is obvious to us, and no doubt to others also, that there is a large amount of drunkenness and rowdyism in this town; and it is shameful to those who practice it, and the town authorities who tolerate it; but we are clear that it is not the licensed houses that cause it. It seems to us that certain police regulations, properly enforced, would stop a large amount of the drunken. to us that certain police regulations, properly enforced, would stop a large amount of the drunkenness and rowlyism complained of. There is no reason why men should be allowed to get drunk and commit breaches of the peace and other violations of the law in face of the authorities. All these men are liable to be arrested, no matter whether there are licensed houses in town or net, when they get drank and become an amoyance to peaceable and orderly civizens; and the manicipal authorities should see to it that the peacefulness and order of the town is preserved. We are sure that this trouble is attributed to the wrong cause, when "it is charged to the licensed houses. It is caused by a failure on the part of the authorities to inforce proper police regulations. We do not refuse these licenses because there is drunkenness on your streets; for we think it cannot be traced to the license houses, and it cannot be suppressed by suppressing licenses; but it can be suppressed by the arrest and punishment of men who get drank and commit broaches of the peace."

APPRECIATED COMPLIMENTS .- The commencement last week of the sixteenth vol-ume of the FREEMAN has and is calling forth many kind expressions and warm commendations from our brethreu of the press, but nothing quite so handsome as the following from the Johnstown Daily Tribune of Monday last has as yet came under our observa-tion. Brother Swank may rest assured that his good wishes are highly appreciated, and that we are heartily thankful to him for them: THE Ebensburg FREEMAN, with the Issue of last THE Ebensburg FREEMAN. With the Issue of last week, began its sixteenth volume under the supervision of H. A. McPike. The FREEMAN is edited with ability, printed with care, and conducted in every way in a conscientious manner—on the whole it is a better paper than is printed in any other town in the State with no greater dimensions than Ebensburg. For the editor's persistent and palms-taking performance of what he conceives to be his duty, he deserves nothing but praise from everybody, and the good will of the Democracy above anybody in the county who has not worked so faithfully as he has, and we can recall no one who has. But, in his case, as in others, it is not the piedding wheelhorse that gets the sugar, but the "leader," who is front because he has the style—in humans called cheek—with not half the usefulness or ability of his less forward companions. The Freeman and its editor have the best wishes of the Tribure, if that's of any consequence.

OLD-TIME ELECTION RETURNS

HOW THEY WERE TRANSMITTED BEFORE THE DATS OF TELEGRAPHS -SOME INTER-

ESTING POLITICAL HISTORY. EDITOR FREEMAN-Dear Sir : On the day after the last November election, when the telegraph had substantially announced the result in the State, a young man who then cast his first vote, asked me to tell him, if I could, in some future number of the FREEMAN, how long a time it required before the telegraph came into general use to ascertain the vote of the State, and how the elec-tion returns were received. I told him I would do so, and I will now not only fulfil that promise, but refer, in addition, to some matters not immediately connected with the cidents connected with a political campaign goes back to the memorable contest for Govor in 1838 between Jos. Ritner and David R. Porter, the first-named having been renominated by the anti-Masonic party, and the other (Porter) being the Democratic nomi-This was six years before the first telegraph line in this country-that between Washington and Baltimore—was erected by Morse, its inventor, in the face of almost inuntable difficulties. The Ritner and Porter campaign was, so far as my knowledge of elections extends, the most exciting and hotly contested one that has ever occur red in this State. It became so in consequence of the vindictive and bitter attacks made upon the personal character of Porter by the Ritner press, and also from the settled and deliberate determination of Thaddeus Stevens, then one of the Canal Commissioners, who was the power behind the throne. greater than the throne itself, and of Thomas H. Burrowes, Secretary of the Common-wealth, and Chairman of the Ritner State Committee, to carry the election at all bazstated. In his last week's issue the editor ands, by fair means, if they could, but in any event to carry it. The amount of money staked on the result was enormous. Betting became a perfect mania all over the State, and it was a rare thing to meet with a man who had not wagered something on the suc-cess of his candidate. If it was not money, it was a coat, a hat, or a pair of boots, and often a horse, a cow, or an ox.

Two four-horse stage coaches, forming the line between Pittsburgh and Hawisburg, passed through this place each day, one gopassed through this place each day, one go-ing east and the other west, and the way-bill, in addition to the list of passengers, contained the first and subsequent result of the elec-tion in the different counties along the route. Before the stage left Pittsburgh, on the day after the election, the agent of the line in that city wrote on the way-hill what he then knew about the vote in Allegheny county. and gave what was regarded as the probable result in that county. When the stage ar-rived at Murraysville, in Westmoreland county, Gen. Murray, a veteran Democrat, at whose hotel the stage stopped, added on the way-bill the returns from that county, as far as he knew them with his estimate of Porter's majority in the county. At Blairsville the vote of Indiana county, as far as received, was noted down, and when the stage reached this place the vote of Cambria, then contain ing ten election districts, was added, and in all the other counties as the stage passed on to Harrisburg. The way-bill from Harrisburg to Pittsburg was used for the same purpose, and by Thursday night the returns on way-bill going east and those of another going west were known here; but, as they were very meagre, no intelligent opinion could be formed of the general result. By Friday night, although the way-bills contain-ed a great many additional returns from the north-western and remote eastern counties, they did not afford any decided encouragement to the friends of either candidate; still they formed the material out of which the adherents of each built innumerable castles in the air. It was believed that all doubt would be removed by Saturday night, when the stage arrived from the east, and such proved to be the case. There was a general rush to the hotel when the sound of the stage driver's tin born announced his near approach—even the small boy of that day participating in the excitement, and forming a large and important part of the anxions crowd. Among the stage passengers was the late John G. Miles, Esq., of Huntingdon, on his way to Pittsburgh. He was known to all the citizens of our town, and both Michael JUDGE DEAN AND THE LICENSE QUESTION.

—In the Huntingdon county court, two weeks ago, Judge Dean refused for certain reasons, which he stated, to grant two license applications. The Judge then referred to the "large amount of drunkenness and row-dyism" which seem to prevail at the county and the county on the ragged edges of hope and fear; but at the most referred to the search at the county and there on the ragged edges of hope and fear; but at the most referred to the search at the county and there on the ragged edges of hope and fear; but at the most referred to the most referred to the "large amount of drunkenness and row dyism" which seem to prevail at the county and both Michael Dan Magehan, a Ritner man, and Dr. Smith, a Porter man, immediately undertook to interview him. Mr. Miles, who was a strong the property of the property length he announced that the returns re-ceived at Huntingdon that morning from Bradford and the northern tier of counties, showed that they had given Porter majorities > pated, as to render his election certain by about five thousand majority. And thus the long agony was over on the fifth night after As an indication of the extremely bitter feeling that marked the contest, I recollect that as soon as Mr. Miles made the statement that Porter was elected beyond all doubt, a prominent Rilner man in the room avowed his willingness to bet ten dollars to five with any "Loco-Poco" that Porter would be in the penitentiary before the end of the year 1839, and he would have put up his money without hesitation, so wild was the political frenzy of the day. It may be here stated that the newspapers in each county, on the day after the election, issued small slips, or extras, containing the returns of their respective counties, so far as they were known, and when these extras reached the printing offices to which they were sent they furnished data from which to make a gradual approach to a more intelligent estimate of the general result. A most notable feature of that remarkable campaign was the powerful influence exerted by the addresses to the people of the State, Issued by the Chairmen of the two State Central Committees. Such productions are now generally regarded with indifference—as mere sound and fury, signifying nothing. They were published at short intervals, were usually of extreme length, and were written with great ability. Their appearance in the county papers was looked forward to with intense interest, and it was made the business of the party leaders to see that they reached every nook and corner of every county in the Commonwealth. Each of the two parties put its best foot forward in these addresses, and regarded the arguments they contained as the strongest possible appeal that could be made to the voters in favor of the election of its candidate. So important were they considered that if a newspaper of either party had for any reason whatever omitted or neglected to publish one of them, the offense would never have been condoned. The Chairman of the Ritner State Committee was Thomas H. Burrowes, who, as before stated, was Secretary of the Commonwealth, and Dr. Daniel Sturgeon, of Fayette county, then the State Treasurer, was Chairman of the Posts State Committee. The man of the Porter State Committee. The addresses issued by that Committee were especially vigorous and able, and had given Dr. Sturgeon a very strong hold on the gratitude of the Democracy of the State. He was not, however, their author, that credit being entirely due to Ovid F. Johnson, Esq., a lawyer of Harrishurg, who was rewarded by lawyer of Harrisburg, who was rewarded by Governor Porter with the office of Attorney-

Dr. Sturgeon was a man of unquestionable integrity, and possessed a large share of strong, sterling common sense, but he was absolutely guiltless of having written anything but his name to the addresses referred to, and which aided so materially in bringing about the election of David R. PORTAGE, PA., Jan. 30, 1882. DEAR FREEMAN. - Business is quite brisk in this locality, and quite a number of new buildings are being erected. Messrs. J. C. Martin & Co. contemplate the erection of some twenty new houses (you don't suppose they would build old ones do you?) in the Spring (of the year.) This enterprising firm are also extending their railroad about one mile, in the direction of Jerry Gleason's, to a point at which they have tapped the "white ash" vein of coal. The coal in this vein at said point is declared by experts (not insanity experts) to be beautiful and bountiful—gorgeously excellent, so to speak. It is of much brightness, and of anthracitical solidity. When Messrs. M. & Co. get their road completed they will have an of the force completed they will have one of the finest coal operations on the mountain, provided none of the "stalwart" companies pounce down upon it two hundred strong, and keel it over into Trout Run.

Much talk there has been about the opening of coal on land of E. McGlade, Esq., and also on the reservation of the Messrs. Flinn. These enterprises will, in all buman probability, bud forth in the early Spring. May they. Our schools are progressing. A little late beginning, but then, you know, great enter-prises must, of necessity, move slowly. A lecture on "Ireland of To-day" was delivered here, in the Lutheran church, on Friday evening last, by Rev. J. J. Kerr, of Altoona. Mr. Kerr handled the subject in a masterly manner, and though his mission is no doubt to preach "peace and good will to men," he didn't manifest much love for British tyrants in his lecture on the above occasion. How could be, and be a man, and especially an American citizen?

Miss Ellen McLaughlin, one of two maiden sisters who have lived for nearly half a censisters who have lived for nearly half a censisters.

Her sister Rose, some years younger, survives her. May she rest in peace. The general health of our people is very good. The only artisan that cannot find remunerative employment here is the doctor. We are a very healthy people, considering Messrs. Hahn & McGeary have established an agency here in the sewing machine line. They are young gentlemen of energy and ability, and are driving a brisk trade. If any housekeeper whom they may tackle does not become possessed of a sewing machine it will be because they are not afraid of being talked to death. The Singer variety is what they deal in, and these young men say the name is very appropriate, as they are well enleulated to make the person sing who unerates them, though they never "Singe(r)d" before; so nice, smooth and noiselessly do

BEN'S CREEK, Jan. 31, 1882. EDITOR FREEMAN .- On the night of Saturday, the 21st inst., Louis Delahunt got off the mail train at this station, and started for his home about one-half mile east of here. He walked along the railroad track, and the night being stormy and he more or less under the influence of liquor, he was unfortunately killed by a freight train. His body was mutilated almost beyond recognition. All this was horrible to contemplate, and especially was it distressing to his family and friends, and in their great distress they have the sin cere sympathy of the whole community. But was it not enough for them to suffer? In the opinion of some of the very wise men of the community it seems not. inaugurated, and, to make that appear justifiable, the story must be put in circulation that Mr. Delahunt had been foully dealt with, This was communicated to the press far and near, and all the dailies, east and west, large and small, had the horrible story prominent ly presented in their columns as "A murder at Ben's Creek," "Strong suspicion of foul play," etc. A physician was sent for, who, after careful examination, couldn't see the "reasonable ground for suspicion;" the jury. after two days' deliberation, couldn't see it and nobody else could see it, except those who wanted notoriety-and they have got it. 'Cambria county's greatest coroner' probably have seen it in the same light, were

OBITUARY.

FAGAN —Hied, at the residence of her parents near Altoons, on Thursday, Isn. 26, 1882, of consumption, Assume chiest daughter of Thomas and Marcella Fagan, formerly of this place, aged 23 years, I mouth and 8 days.

The remains of the deceased were brought to this place for interment on Saturday forenoon, and were escarted from the railroad station by a number of the young ladies and gentlement (wearing badges) belonging to the Sociality connected with the Church of the Holy Name, of which she had been a faithful and exemplary member, and slao by many other sympathicing friends. The usual religious ceremonies at the church and a brief but touching discourse by Rev. Father Reardon, were followed by the last and rites at the grave. Miss Annie was a most exemplary and well beloved young lady, greatly esteemed by all who knew her, and many there are who will sincerely mourn her early and untimely death. May she rest in jeace.

CARRIGAN.—Died, at the residence of Prudence of Prude CARRIGAN.—Died, at the residence of Pru-dence and Rachel George, at Lally's Station, on Sunday, Jan. 15, 1882, Mr. Michigal Carrigan, aged 85 years, 7 months and 15 days. Deceased was born in Hentingdon county, from whence he came in his early youth to this county whence he came in his early youth to this county with his father. Peter Carrigan, Sr., one of the old Revolutionary soldiers, and settled near Loretto, where he spent a few years in the employ of the renowned prince and orders. Rev. Father Gallitzin. Fortage township. From Loretto he went as first lentemant of a voil unteer company to the war of 1812. In 1819 he worked on that part of the turnpike between Elected and Cresson, and in 1823 he removed to Pittsburg, where he married a Miss Craig and became the father of two daughters. In 1822 he went to Harrisburg with the "Silver Greys," where he remained until anid organization was discharged from the service. After years of wandering and toll, he settled in Armstrong county in 1875, where he be buried his wife and shortly afterward his two daughters. In 1878 he lost his sight and would have become a charge on the county had he not been taken to the home of his nieces, where he was cared for like a father until death. His remains cared for like a father until death. His remains were interred in the Summitville cemetery. May his soul rest in peace.
