Each of the men who finished the race receives what he would consider very handsome pay for a week's work, even so tremendous a week's work as he has undergone. The winner gets between $20,000 and $25,000 and the second man some $7 000 which is assuredly a hundred times as much as the reason to suppose that either of them could arn in any other vocation than pedestrian. ism. As long as the gate-money to provid. mms like these is forthcoming from a simple public it is likely that go-as you-please matches will continue to be made and run. Mr Buckle, in one of those passages of his history which show most delightfully his in-capacity to draw perfectly obvious conclusions, sets forth that an opera-singer and an opera dancer receive large sums by way of eral vocations. Mr. Ruckle might have it seconnted" on a similar hypothesis for the large sum of money paid to the winner of a six-day walk, but his hypothesis would omit the obvious fact that while, as the bserves, all run and only one obtains the rize, those who run and get nothing must be at least as discenniable as the one who vins, even as the coryphers are not presumably pursuing a more laudable calling than the Donna assoluta who gets a hundred show that the pedestrian who have $1,000 for the privilege of running himself to a standstill ad getting nothing whatever but his aches for his pains, stands higher in public esteem than the pedestrian who pockets $29,000 as the price of his infamy. On the contrary, in the only public which the pedestrians ractically know anything about, the winner of a six-day match is a much more envied ng than the authority of a "History of Civilization in England " while a man hope-lessly beaten is described as a "duffer," which is an enithet analogous to that of 'prig" and "pedant" which some have beowed upon philosophic historians. It is to be honed, however, that now that with something to spare, some pedestrian contest will be devised which does not afford so cruel a test of endurance. cannot walk himfelf to death but he may ery possibly run himself to death, as Rowell came near doing in the present race; and at any rate it is not likely that any of the men who take part in such a contest will ever be as sound after the race as they were before. seems to be indicated by the fact that two of the pedestrians in this race were attacked by rheumatism while the race was in The only test of human endur ance which can be commended is one which a man in proper condition can endure without permanent injury, and it seems clear that a six days' "go-as-you-please" race is enciente was respited from the execution of not such a test.

A farmer in the Neustead neighborhood, near Hopkinsville, Kv., left some gambreled swine hanging on a pole out of doors. Dur ing the night a colored man stole a shoat and walked off with the pork on his shoulders. In attempting to pitch the animal over a ice a half mile away, the gambrel-stick caught the thief's neck and the force of the fall was so great that the neck was broken. On the following day a person riding by saw a strange sight—on one side of the fence a dead titlef and suspended on the other a dead

RESPONSIBLE FOR ITS ACTIONS .- A de cision of interest to banks has been rendered in the District Court of Cincinnati. The facts of the case are that O Q Frank was led through fa ise statements of one Leonard, to buy a thousand dollar note or mortgage from Mrs. Howard, subsequently ascertained to ne a fictitions personage, giving therefor his theck for 914,25. This check was presented to Kuhn & Sons, bankers, by a veiled lady whom Leonard identified by payee, Mrs Howard, and endorsed for. It was a year before the trick came to light, and Frank brought suit against the bank to recove the amount of the check, which was tried and resulted in a verdict in favor of Frank. The bank brought the case into the District Court upon error. Judge Smith, in deciding the questions, said that the bank was responsible for its actions, was bound to know whom it paid to, and was bound by the endorsement it accepted. He sustained the rulings of the Court below.

W. T. LYNN, writing to Notes and Queries, the anniversary of the day on which the Res-We shall keep Easter this year on urrection really occurred. The only real doubt now about the year of that great event is whether it was A. D. 29 or 30. If the latter, the Paschal full moon fell that year on Thursday, April 6; the Crucifixion would be the next day—April 7, and the Resurrection

AN APPARITION OF THE VIRGIN AND CHILD AT TROY, N. Y.

A special desputch from Troy to the New York World, dated March 5th, says York World, dated March 5th, says:

There is much expitement bere ever the alleged appearance of the Virgin Mary and United in a house on First street occupied by several tenants. One family consists of Thes. Jones and sister and Ellem Mahoney, an old blind woman. They old much that the Virgin has appeared on several occasions and always about 5 o'clock w. M. On the wall in the room harse a picture of the Virgin Mary and under this picture there is an abrasion in the wall which resembles a cross in shaps. The people say that the apparition first appeared on between the was something unnatural in the room. When hey first saw the apparition they supposed it was the picture, but when they looked again the picture was absauling in its accessioned picke and below it appeared the Virgin and the Child as large as life, with a strange light surrounding them which filled the room with a sort of vaper. A reporter visited the house to investigate the matter. While talking with the itimates several of the neighbors eame in and began beliefing what they had seen. came in and began believe what they had seen. The old man, Jones, was giving the visitor an account of the first appearance of the apparition, when suddenly all the women went down on their kness and becam to make the sign of the cross. The reporter looked in the direction of the sign of the true to the first sion on the wall and declared that the cross, with the letters "I H S" on it was libraried. he letters "L. H. S." on it, was illuminated rought out in bold relief. The illumination i brought out in fold relief, the Humination inst-ed but a moment. A careful examination was made to discover any traces of phosphorus on the marks, but none could be found. The room is so situated that no light from a marke hardern or oth-er apparatus could be thrown upon that part of the walf where the apparation appears. The reporter saw nothing resembling the Virgin Mary, but the irgin and Unild had never appeared at the mas Jones and his sister the following persons n to have seen the apparition: 3. Prest, Mrs. Cauley, Mrs. Peters, Mary Ann Favrell, W.m. Ryan,
