A BRAVE ACT .- A few days ago a nanny goat owned by a Prospect family was driven down the hill toward the Pennsylvania railroad by a pack of dogs. It was hounded so close, that finally, in order to save itself, it was obliged to leap over a small precipice. The bounds of the ledge on which it lit were so narrow that the little animal had scarcely room to turn about, while below it was another precipice, about fifty feet high; and while it was safe from the dogs, which soon abandoned the sport, it was unable to get up or down the hill. This happened in the morning, at a point back of and in plain view from the residence of Mr. William Gerview from the residence of Mr. William Gerview from the residence of Mr. hardt, in Conemaught Borough, That gen-tleman took pity on the goat, and in the afternoon, provided with a stout rope, he went forth to rescue it. Climbing the hill to a point just above where the goat stood, he fastened one end to the tree and the other about his body, and with that surprising agility which has made him famous as a circus gymnast, climbed down over the precipice and released the little animal from its perilicus and released the little animal from its perilicus and released the little animal from its perilicus. ous position.
