CALLED TO HIS REWARD.

DEATH OF THE WELL KNOWN JOURNALIST AND LAWYER, CASPAR W. EASLY.

The announcement of the death of C. W. Easly, a gentleman of more than ordinary ability as a newspaper writer, and a brotherin-law by first marriage of the editor of this paper, while it will, of course, cause a deep feeling of sincere regret among his numerous friends, will not occasion any sudden sur-prise, owing to the fact that his health has een greatly impaired for several years past. He was the victim of consumption, and al-though on several occasions he seemed about entering into the valley of the shadow of death, his life was prolonged until at last, wearied and worn out by repeated hemorr-hages, he laid himself down and with patient submission calmiy awaited the end that he felt was slowly but surely approaching. He was a son of Hon. George W. Easly, of Johnstown, where he was born, and died at the residence of his father, in that place, about one o'clock on last Sunday morning, being at the time a few months over forty-one years When the civil war broke out the subject

Col. Speakman's 133d Pennsylvania Regiment for the nine months' service, at the end of which he returned home. In 1873, when the Johnstown Daily Tribune was established, he became its local editor, a position which he filled with more than ordinary ability up to within a short time pre-vious to his death. As an industrious, pains-taking gatherer of home news he had no su-perior, and always made the local columns of the Tribune exceptionally interesting and entertaining to the readers of that journal, whose editor, we have no doubt, will seriously feel the loss of this ready and industrious pen. His connection with the Tribune caused him to be widely known throughout the west-ern part of the State, and those who formed his acquaintance will always bear his mem-ory in cherished recollection. His friends were legion, and we do not think he had an

duction:

"In the latter part of 1854 he (Easly) visited Mexico, partly for the benefit of his health and partly in the hope of profiting by a speculation that opened up, and which seemed to offer large returns. He was for a time in charge of a body of workmen engaged on a railroad that was then building from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico, and it was while thus employed that he had a most thrilling experience. Maximilian, Archduke of Austria, after accepting the crown of Mexico from Napoleon III., had landed in the "new kingdom" a few months before, and scenes of violence and bloodshed were of frequent occurrence. Mr. Easly was one day so infortunate as to be in the immediate vicinity of a small squad of the ambitious Maximilian's soldiers when they were surrounded by a large body of hostile Grensers and taken prisoners. He was suspected of being in sympathy with the foreigners, and was obliged to go along. The soldiers were at once condemned to be hong, and nineteen of them were executed before Mr. Easly's eyes. His turn had just some when a new Mexi an arrival, a friend, recognized him and secured his release. The Grensers first robbed him of everything he possessed, and then told him to "git," which he was not long in doing. He afterward edited the American department of a paper that was printed in Vera Cruz, and on it did his first regular journalistic work. While at Vera Cruz he invested in a coffee plantation, but about this time his life was so often in danger that, acting on a sudden resolve, he left the country and came home."
