AN OLD-TIME SUPERSTITION

BOW THE PEOPLE OF LEENSBURG WRESTLED WITH A WHOOPING COUGH SCOURGE MORE THAN FIFTY YEARS AGO.

In a conversation the other day with a cit zen of this place who was born and raised in Ebensburg and is now upward of sixty years of age, the fact that small-pox has made its appearance in our midst brought up the subject of opidemics in general and re-minded our old friend of a rather singular minded our old friend of a rather singular incident which occurred in this community when he was quite a small boy, and which may be worth narrating. It seems that whooping cough was raging among the little folks of our town at the time indicated and that a superstition prevailed here as elsewhere, and may even yet prevail in some lo-calities that if children afflicted with or liable to the disease were passed five or six times under the belly of a donker, otherwise known as a jack, that a speedy cure or a sure escape from the dreaded scourge would be the result. As tack would have it a donkey arrived in town about this time on its way to Pittsburg, and as no difficulty was experferced in inducing the owner to permit the experiment to be tried, the animal was properly secured in a stable which then stood on the spot new occupied by the wareroom of Messrs. V. S. Barker & Bro., and to this place all the children of the town, or at least all of those whose parents had faith in he panacea, were brought and put through "jassackical" process in rapid succession, a man on one side of the donkey passing each child the requisite number of times to another man on the opposite side, that method of putting the veungsters through the process being as essential to the cure or prevention of the disease as any other part of programme. At least that was the way it was done on the occasion to which we refer, our informant not being sure but that he came in for his share of the treatment, and while there are no doubt plenty of people now a days who would laugh at the strange conceit of those who preceded them more then a half century ago, it is a fact easily demonstrated that in this enlightened age fully as many can be found who take as much stock as their forefathers did in methods just as ridiculous for the alleged cure or revention of nearly all the ills that flesh is heir to as the stamping-out of a whooping cough epidemic by the strange process we have attempted to describe. Whether the relief sought for through the aid of Mr. Jack was obtained or not our informant was una-ble to say, being too young at the time to note the result, but certain it is that if the scourge ceased its ravages the poor donkey had about as much to do with it as Balaam's ass or Barnum's big elephant, the renowned

The "Procession of the Trades," at Joinstown on the day Foropsugh exhibits there. Every town in the county will be represented in this huge, highway holiday parade. In addition to this, the prost pageants of "Cleopatra" and "Lalla Rookh" will be presented in the show parade. This istiter spectrate is described as being the most gorgeons ever seen upon the strends of an American city. The loveliest hady in the land has been secured to personify the beautiful Eastern Princess, Lalla Rookh, whom posts describe as "more beautiful than any of these herolnes whose names and loves embolish the songs of Persia and Hisdostan; more perfect than the divinest images of the House of Azor." In this gorgeous, gilttering, oriential pageant, Lalla Rookh is seen reolining in her sumptuous howdah, borne aloft upon the back at a pondrous and kindly elephant, the larg-cat on this continent, whose embroidered velvest back of a pondrous and kindly elephant, the largest est on this continent, whose embroidered velvet trappings touch the ground; a fair young female slave sits faming the Princess through the roze-colored valls, with teathers of argus-pheasant's wings, and the lovely troupe of Tartarian and Cashimercan maids of honor ride upon each side of the Princess mean small Arabian horses.
