LETTER FROM MINESOTA.

HASTINGS, Minn., April 20, 1882. FRIEND MAC-It is now more than four years since I bade adiou to Cambria and turned my face toward the setting sun in hopes to find a laud of promise, for

"There's a country famed ingstory.
As you've aften times been told;
The a land of mighty rivers.
Running over sands of gold—
The abode of peace and plouty.
And with quistness 'tis blost,
But this land that is so famous
Is away off in the West."

So to seek this land of promise we commenced our journey westward on April 9th, 1878, in company with Messrs. P. M. & W. J. Woleslagie, of Wilmore, and Robert McCauliff, of Somerset. After a pleasant journey we arrived safely at our destination, Fort Scott, Kansas, where we parted company with Messis. Woleslagie, they going to Girard, while Mr. McCauliff and myself started for St. Mary's. Mr. Woleslagle soon tired of Kansas, as we expected he would, for he was so auxious to reach his destination that the train traveled entirely too slow for him. He was desirous to reach home, as he termed it, and expected to find a land where the rivers flowed with honey and the banks were lined with gingerbread; but he was badly disappointed. We found in Kansas many old friends, among them Mr. Jacob Stiffler and S. P. Donmyer, of New Cambria, and Messrs Berg, of Salina, who very kindly welcomed us.

After a sojourn of more than two years in Kansas I concluded that I would go to Minnesola for a change of climate, which I tound to be very beneficial to my health. Soon after arriving in Minessota I visited our mu-tual friends, Mr. William O'Connell and family, whom I found in good health and spirits and who gave me a very hearty greeting. I next visited Mr. W. H. Elder, who lives near by; also Mr. James Elder, of Cannon Falls—all old neighbors from Cambria. I soon after took a trip to the famous Bed River valley, of which I shall speak in another letter, and had the pleasure of meeting Messrs. Michael McDuan and John and David O'Harra, all of whom I not only found prospering in good health and spirits, but loud in their praises of the Nile region of America, as the valley of the Red River is familiarly called; but as I will give a more extended account in the future, a passing otice will suffice for the present.

I regret to announce the severe illness of drs. William O'Connell, who has been very sick for some weeks, but who I am happy to say is now recovering and I trust will con-tinue to do so until fully restored to her us-ual health. The liness of Mrs. O'Connell was the occasion of bringing together a group of Cambrians who had not met for about eighteen years. They were Messrs. John and Michael McDunn, W. H. and J. Elder, John O'Harra and your correspondent, and had it not been for the sad occasion which called us together it would have been a far happier meeting than it was.
We congratulate the Democracy of Cambria on their success last fall to electing their ticket, headed by our old and esteemed friend, 'Squire Kennedy. We here in Dakota county also followed suit, electing all the county ticket save one, which was a return to the old political principles.

The municipal elections held in various towns in this State resulted in Democratic victories, Hastings elected a Democratic Mayor, Mr. John Maloy, a former Cambrian, and Rochester, Faribault, Fergus Falls, Minneapolis, and other places, followed suit. Hope the good work will continue. As this is merely an introductory, I will close by sending my regards to all the read-Yours truly, F. P. McConmics.

ENOCH ARDEN REDIVIVES.

A REMARKABLE STORY OF LOVE, MARRIAGE AND SEPARATION, FOLLOWED BY A SEC-OND MATRIMONIAL ALLIANCE AND AN UNEXPECTED DENOUEMENT.

As the author of the following romance in real life, our young friend C. S. Clark, city editor of the Council Bluffs (Ia.) Datly Nonpareil, was born and raised in this place, and as all the characters in the "o'er true tale" formerly resided in Altoona, where both wed-dings took place, we need offer no excuse for transferring the story to our local columns. Here it is in full:

transferring the story to our local columns. Here it is in full:

As the Nonparell city scribe sat in his chair yes terday, wondering what he could secure for a Sunday article of interest, he was aroused from his lethargy by a gentle tap upon the sanctum door. In response to a sonorous request to "come in," the door opened and a stately appearing gentleman crossed the threshold of the city editor's den. "Is the city editor in 7" was the first question propounded, and upon the assurance that he was present the visitor proceeded to unfold a tale which the long, lank city scribe was forced to admit was something simply miraculous, and producing his notehook secured the following interesting particulars of a really remarkable class:

In 1851, at the breaking out of the Southern reballion, a friend of the gentleman who narrated the facts was a young man engaged in the newspaper business. For some time previous he had been courting an estimable young indy of Altoona, Pa., the great railway centre of the Pennaylvania road, and as a result of the natural order of things he was engaged to and eventually married the young lady. But the call for troops to go to the resous of our imperiled cuntry induced the young man to proceed to the front, and taking a fond farewell of his charming young bride he entered the service. He was engaged in several flerce and bloody battles, and finally word was received by his wife that he had been killed in the battle of Amietam. The young wife's heart was bowed down with the grief of a wildow's secrows, and for a time after the raceipt of the news of her husband's death on the field of battle her own life was despaired of, for the terrible announcement came when she needed more than at any other the tender processed for the supported fatheriess boy. To her innocent offspring the rerrowing widow devoted her time and that affection and care which only a true mother knows how to extend.

Months became years, and the young widow continued to mourn the tragic death of the brave husband and fath business and the family continued to reside for same years. In the natural order of things the family multiplied until it numbered, in addition to the husband, wife and oldest son, who is now a young man engaged in business for himself, four other children, two sons and two handsome daughters. The family lived happily, and the younger brothers and sisters grew to manhood and womanhood, the mother meantime mourning for her solder husband as only a woman in a second markal relationship would be apt to mourn.

A law days ago there appeared in Red Oak a gentleman of middle age and of fine and rather attractive bearing. Calling on a business man there with whom he was acquainted, he inquired as to the whereabouts of the family referred to, and was shown their place of-residence. He was also informed in reply to inquiries as to their condition in life, the number of the family, and the fact that the son of the wife by a former husband had gone into business for himself in the employ of a firm in Burlington. A look of trouble manifest the face of the new arrival, and bidding his Red Oak irlend farewell, he departed. His next stop was in Council Binifs, where he vesterday met another acquaintance whom he had known in boyhood days in the east. To this friend he told his story. The visitor was none other tann the "soldier husband," whose "widow" is next the wife of another man and the mother of another man's children. Learning of her happiness, he did not feel disposed to make his identity known, preferring to leave matters as they now exist rather than visit his wife or permit her to know that preferring to leave matters as they now exist rather than visit his wife or permit her to know that he is still alive, though in the excitement of the war he was by mistake reported killed. What he may do nobedy knows, but probably he will make himself known for the purpose of claiming his boy, and then leave the innocent victim of a "double marriage" undistanced in her present family relations, knowing, as he does, that the consented to marry again only after, a reasonable season of supposed widowhood, and not until she felt assured that her first husband had fallen a victim of a cruel rebellion which resulted in pushing so many strange incidents, of which this is one.

As an explanation of the long absence of husing to leave matters as they now exist rath

On motion the Street Commissioner was instructed to notify all persons having pavements which need repairing or replacing to have the same done within thirty days and finally wandered to Uties, N. Y., where he was placed by Masonio friends, who recognized in him. strally wandered to Utica, N. Y., where he was placed by Masonic friends, who recognized in him a member of the order, in the asylum there for the insane and feeble-minded. In a few years he recovered and was dismissed, clear in mind and active in body. Then he began a search for his wife, but as nearly ten years had elapsed, and she had remarried and left the country, he found that no one in Altoona knew whithet ahe had gone with husband No. 2, and after years of inquiry and writing he learned only a few weeks ago of their present whereabouts and the true state of affairs, and only with a view of looking after his son did he follow the wife of his younger days to the western home of herself and her new husband.

> SUMMONS IN EJECTMENT. - The Johnstown Tribune says that on Saturday last Deputy-Sheriff Kinkead summoned the Cambria Iron Company, the Gautier Steel Company (limited) and the Johnstown Manufacturing Company to be and appear before the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Cambria county, on the first Monday of June next, to answer a certain complaint made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to the ef-fect that the above-named corporations now have in their actual possession lots of ground situated in Conemaugh borough, Conemaugh situated in Commangh borough, Comemangh township and Franklin borough, comprised in the property of the old Portage Railroad, which the Pennsylvania Central claims to have and to hold by right of purchase from the commonwealth. The property in dispute begins at the point in the centre line of the old Portage Railroad where the north line of Church street in Commany horometry. line of Church street, in Conemaugh borough, which runs from Railroad street in a south-easterly direction to Johnstown borough, would intersect the same, if prolonged, and thence continues to the east end of the old tunnel, at the head of Plane No. 1—a distance of about four miles.
