As ill or good luck would have it, however, the steamer upon which he took passage became disabled and had to put into Newfoundland, where by the merest chance Mr. Hawkins found his brother, with whom he remained until the final earthly parting came, the latter taking sick and dying soon after the event we have narrated. SCHOOLS OF CAMBRIA COUNTY.

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT OF COUNTY SUPER-INTENDENT STRAYER.

I have the honor to submit to the department the following report of the schools of Cambria county for the school year ending June 1, 1882. I am glad to be able to report that the ed-ucational interests of the county have made material progress during the year, and I have good reasons to believe that much more will be accomplished during the coming year. The facts concerning the progress of our schools will be found in the statistical report. HOUSES. The following named districts have built houses during the year: Portage, one; White, one; Reade, two; Carroll, one; Taylor, one; one; Reade, two; Carroll, one; Taylor, one; Barr, one; Upper Yoder, one. Two rooms were added to the public school building in Ebensburg; South Fork added a room to its building; Susquehanna enlarged one house. The new houses are all substantially built but we still have a number of old buildings, unfit for use, which should be replaced by new ones as soon as possible. Neat and du rable school houses are evidences of public spirit and intelligence in a community, and it is matter for congratulation to be able to report that our directors in the country districts are beginning to feet this, and that they, too, are providing good, comfortable houses. FURNITURE AND APPARATUS. The new houses that were built during the year were nearly all supplied with good fur-niture. Reade furnished both new houses with the celebrated "Triumph" desk. White seated its handsome new house with approved desks. Taylor, Portage, Upper Yoder, Ebensburg and South Fork provided patent furniture for their new hous certainly poor economy to build good houses and fall to provide them with comfortable seats, when the cost is but a trifle more than the cost of home-made furniture, while the advantage is very great. The School Board of East Conemaugh supplied their schools with free text books; Clearfield purchased Pelton's outline maps for all the schools. The enterprising boroughs of Woodvale, Conemand and Millville supplied their schools with valuable apparatus. A number of other districts furnished their schools with maps, charts, globes, etc. I hope to be able to report in the future still further improvement in furniture and apparatus. A library was established in Woodvale brough the efforts of their principal and the liberality of the Board of Directors.

EXAMINATIONS. Thirty examinations were held in the different districts of the county. These meetings were well attended by directors and citizens. In order to relieve the applicants of embarrassment as far as possible, lists of printed questions were supplied, and the work was mostly written. This plan was found to work well. Certificates were granted at the close of the examinations. The teachers were generally selected and schools assigned at the same time. The directors usually consulted with me about the qualifications of applicants before employing them. I was obliged to examine a number of applicants after the regular examinations over, in order to fill the schools.

EDUCATIONAL MEETINGS. About the time of opening the schools, I appointed a number of meetings for teachers, directors and patrons. Twelve such meetings were held throughout the county. A course of study was placed in the hands of teachers and directors and the time was spent in discussing the merits and object of the same. District institutes were held in a few districts. A local institute was held at Garman's Mills, in Susquehanna. A great deal of interest was manifested, and a number of practical educational questions were dis-cussed. The teachers and directors who arranged the meeting deserve credit for their work. I hope to be able to hold and encourage local institutes during the coming year in different parts of the county. The teacher who will not read educational papers and

During my visits to the schools, I was frequently accompanied by directors and patrons, and was much encouraged by their fly assistance. My plan when visiting was to note the classification, make sugges tions, approve of right methods and point out the wrong. I endeavored to make teachers and pupils feel that my object was not to find fault and condemn, but to assist and encourage them in their work. It is certainly encouraging when teachers are anxious to receive suggestions and also enthusiastic in putting them in operation. COUNTY INSTITUTE.

The county institute was held in Johnstown, Dec. 26-30. It was more numerously attended than any previous one. The instructors were State Superintendent E. E. Highee: rof. J. H. Young, Indiana, Pa.; Prof. J. V Montgomery, Millersville, Pa.: Prof. R. B. Hays, Indiana, Pa.; and R. B. Mehaffey, Altoona, Pa. Quite a number of the teachers of the county took an active part in the ex-ercises and contributed very much to the profit and interest of the different sessions The evening lectures were well attended and were highly instructive. The results of the institute were manifest in the valuable hints and methods which our teachers subsequently put in practice in their schools. CONCLUSION.

Most of our people are in favor of an efficient system of education, and this is as it should be. Public schools cannot reach far in advance of public opinion. We have teach ers who are dome good work, but are still compelled to employ some who follow the "old way." Where directors pay liberal salaries and retain their teachers, the schools generally do well.

Directors are responsible for the success of the schools. They should endeavor to create a school sentiment where it does not already exist, and should encourage the teacher in all his work and make him feel that they expect of him whole souled work, the best service of which he is capable.

We need system and co-operation "along the whole line." The teacher that gives no attention to system in his work should not find employment in the school-room. Habits of obedience, industry and self-denial are more valuable than intellectual attainments. Our county is rapidly increasing in wealth and population. We are surpassed by few counties of the State in mining and manufacturing resources. The schools should keep pace with other improvements, and we should field precedence to none in educational af-

In conclusion, I desire to offer my sincere thanks to directors and teachers for the kindness with which they have aided me in my work, to the press of the county for its many favors, and to the School Department for kindly assistance and valuable suggestions. L. STRAYER, County Superintendent.

THOMAS HOUSE, South Fork, July 16, 1882

Yesterday (Sunday) the flag on the Thomas House did not flutter in the breeze, there being no flag to flutter and no breeze to cause any fluttering. There was an unusual quiet at South Fork, and one of its spirited citizens, noticing the torpor of the place, and recollecting that the 9th of July was the anniversary of one of the most important events of the American Revolution, suggested the propriety of commemorating the event next day. The most distinguished citizens of the place took kindly to the idea, and after considering the suggestion and remembering at the same time that they had no contennial anniversary of their own to glorify, nor indeed anything over which to enthuse, resolved upon commemorating the 104th anniversary at the signing at the Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union and, strange as it may seem to the rest of the American people, to the citizens of South Fork is due the credit of remembering and recognizing the fact that on the 9th day of July, 1778, one hundred and four years ago, were signed at Philadelphia the Articles of Confederatian and Perpetual Union between the Colonies of New Hampshire, Connecticut, Massago, were signed at Philadelphia the Articles of Confederatian and Ferpetual Union between the Colonies of New Hampshire, Connecticut, Massagonster, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, North Carolina and Sonth Carolina.

The commemoration of this impertant event being determined upon, early this morning the patriotic South Forkers, without fireworks or frearms, went heroically to work, and from the zeal and enthustasm with which they commenced, the celebration from the start was an assured success. Never was a revolutionary event celebrated with greater colina. The occasion was honored by the presence of a number of distinguished gentlemen from different sections of this broad iand, who participated in the celebration. Anniversaries, if they do no other work than bring to mind the dead heroes of the past, deserve fitting Vesterday (Sunday) the flag on the Thomas ouse did not flutter in the breeze, there being no

Isnac Wike, Esq., before the announcement of the regular toasts, made a few well-timed and very forcible remarks. In speaking of the present an-forcible remarks. In speaking of the present anforcible remarks. In speaking of the present anniversary and anniversaries in general, he spoke as follows: "The sustom of commemorating great events, such as the one we are celebrating to-day, is a worthy one, and the sentiment inspiring it is a noble and elevating one. At anniversaries we learn history more pleasantly and easily than at any other time or in any other manner. We feel a pleasant, living interest in them, they being a part of our life and our age. By anniversaries the past is made present. They bring before us the great men of the past. Theirs were the master min's that fashioned our glorious institutions—they sowed and we reap. The lesson of their lives is one we must learn if we would preserve what they originated, so as to hand their work down unimpaired to our posterity. When we know the founders of our institutions—when we contemplate their virtues, energies and genius, and study their their virtues, energies and genius, and study their works—we drink at the fountain source and grow strong morally and mentally. The chasm of time is spanned—the past and the present are linked together, and the continuity of history is estab-

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Wike's remarks, the toasts were announced, but there having been no previous selection made of gentlemen to respend to the respectine sentiments offered, they were at first not promptly responded to. Especially was there a bungling delay about responding to the "Bench and Bar." It was prebably on account of the banqueters not understanding precisely what kind of a bench and bar was meant. Happily, however, a guest from Pittsburgh, who appeared to comprehend the condition of things, and being equal to the emergency, came to the rescue by rising and volunteering to say that he was somewhat familiar with the kind of a bench and bar proposed to be toasted, and while he had not the exalted opinion of the bench and bar gentlemen they had of themselves, yet he was always willing to give the devil his due, and would say that occasionally a bench or bar gentleman was to be met with who had some pretensions to honor and honcety, and who could at times tell the troth, but that he did not consider them proper subjects to be toasted on an occasion so important and interesting as the present one. Mr. Shaffer's remarks were received with unbounded applause. From that on there was no bungling, and the proceedings were rish, rare and racy. It was delightful to listen to the eloquent responses of Cambria's modern Ciceros. I regret that their specches could not be reported. Short-hand reporters were present, but their stencils were idle. No reporter, no stenographer that ever lived, could do justice to Upon the conclusion of Mr. Wike's remarks, the not be reported. Short-hand reporters were present, but their steneils were idle. No reporter, no stenographer that ever lived, could do justice to the powerful speeches of these trumpet-tongued mountaineers. I shall, therefore, not attempt it, though in my next letter I shall endeavor to give your readers some idea of the trunscendant elequence which fell from their lips on this great and glorious occasion. Carrolltown, July 11, 1852.

Dear Freeman—Permit me to announce that the 4th of July, 1882, is over in Carrolltown. It lasted 72 hours and the average Carrolltownian is now puzzling his brain about the number of days there are in 1882, meantime spending his ovenings at home figuring up his cash account. He says it makes no difference if it don't balance, as he got one nice day for a pie nic anyhow, and that is more than the Ebensburgers got. It is to the Ebensburgers he gives the blame for the bad weather on Tuesday and Wednesday. As soon as the wicked Ebensburger stopped parousing, the weather became pleasant. Next year he is going to get an injunction to prevent Ebensburge from spalling pic-nic day. I tell you it takes Carrolltown boys and girls to dance. A conspiracy was entered into by the carpenters and the weather to prevent any terpsichorean display. The young folks had their minds set upon it, however, and there was no stopping them. Neither "bucking" floors nor weeping clouds could quiet their restless feet, for months wound up in maddening expectancy.

A new association is taking foothold in Carrolltown, namely, the Emerald Beneficial Society.—The energy of a number of our citizens is enlisted in its establishment. It already numbers about twenty members.

An enterprise is also talked of which, if successful, will make even Ebensburg pale with ency.—It is nothing less than a public library and road-Carrolltown, July 11, 1882, All enterprise is also taked of which, it successful, will make even Ebensburg pale with envy.—
It is nothing less than a public library and reading room. A stock company is to be formed and a charter procured. The library will be the property of the stock company and will be in charge of officers elected by the company. How is that for being longer?

WALLCLIFF Savs dear mamma, "I've bought a cake."
All shricked "Hurrah!" in joy and hope.
Toe soon they saw their sad mistake:
Twas but a cake—of scented scap! It was a sell, to be sure; but it is said that somp It was a sell, to be sure; but it is said that soap is a symbol of civilization, and maybe it was all right in the end. To wear good clothes is also an indication of refinement. Such being the case, we may say that we anow no place where the outer covering of man can be procured to better advantage than at Jas. J. Murphy's, 100 Clinton street, Johnstawn. He always carries a full line of the very latest styles; the goods are picked with an eye to use as well as to beauty; a guarantee accompanies cach piece that goes out of the store, and each piece that goes out is sold at lower rates than the same article can be purchased elsewhere. If unable to call on Mr. Murphy in person, an order by mail will be carefully and promptly filled.
