THE TORPEDO FISH.

ITS WEAPONS OF DEFENSE AND THEIR SINGULAR CONSTRUCTION.

The torpedo is often found on Cape Cod. It belongs to the ray family and fishermen are often made very painfully aware of their presence in their nets, the shocks passing up the lines and even following up the splashes of water, com-pleting a current in this insecure way, and giving the men a violent shock. A specimen half dead gave shocks when handled by Dr. Atwood, and in handling others in good condition he experienced others in good condition he experienced hard usage and many shocks that threw of the day received by mail and teteraph from all parts of the world up to the time going to press, at 6 o'clock on Toesday evening. 2. by gasping and the fluttering of its wings. That only seemed to exasperate the fish to further efforts, and ten minutes after the duck was placed in the water it was taken out dead. A large sunfish when put in the tank, showed its terror by trying to leap from it. but falling back it was soon paralyzed by the torpedo. An experiment has been made in giving the torpedo a shock, which was unpleasantly affected, swimming far out of the way and shaking its body with a peculiar motion and opening its gills spasmodically, thus proving that it could be caught with its own weapon. The battery, if it can be called such, occupies a position between the skull and the pectoral fins on each side, and is a wonderful and complicated provision of nature. It is composed of a large number of upright columns, each of which is covered and enclosed by an extremely thin membrane. These columns are again built up of flat disks, separated by a delicate membrane, which seems to contain fluid. This structure may be roughly imitated by piling a number of coins on each other with a bladder oe tween each coin-in fact, a kind of voltaic pile. The length of the columns and consequently the number of disks. varies according to the position in the body. The columns extend almost thro the creature, from the skin of the back to that of the abdomen, and are clearly visible on both sides, so that those in the middle are necessarily the longest and those at either end become gradually shorter. In many large specimens more than one thousand columns were counted, and the number of disks on an average of a hundred to an inch. A Dog Miser,-Instances of the caline economy are by no means rare; but the account of a dog miser, so far as our records extend, are unique. Dandie, the animal referred to, was a New Found-Edinburg. It frequently had money given it, because, besides other interesting signs of sagacity, it would go to the baker's and buy its own bread. But Dandie received more money than his needs called for, and so he took to hoarding it. This his master discovered in consequence of the dog having appeared one day with a breakfast roll when it was known that no one had given him money. Suspicion aroused, search was made in the room where the dog slept, Dandie appeared quite unconcerned about it until his bed was approached. when he seized the servant by the gown and tried to drag her away, and became so violent that the master had to hold him. Sevenpence-half penny was found hidden in the bed. Dandle did not forego his saving propensities even after this but he exhibited a great dislike ever afterward for the servant who had discovcovered his hoard, and in the future took The above cut represents the popular style for the people, which the undersided offers for sale at the wonderful low price of $20. This machine has given perfect satisfaction wherever used, and is warranted for the form of three years. Remember that we are here all the time and that you not only have every opportunity to examine the machine and see it in operation, but you know where to come to get your money back if the machine and see it in operation, but you know where the come to get your money back if the machine parelled even in canine records. > Chamber's Journal. freezing parts may be rendered wholly usensible to pain, so that slight surgi cal operations may be easily performed, When the freezing is long continued the frozen parts lose their vitality entirewhich will cause them to slough away. By this means excrescences, as warts, wens, and polypi, fibrous and se-braceous tumors and even malignant tumors, as cancers, may be successfully removed, Small cancers may be sometimes cured by repeated and long continued freezing. Their growth may cer-tainly be impeded by this means. A convenient mode of application in cancer of the breast is to suspend from the neck a rubber bag filled with ice, allowing it to lie against the cancerous organ. Freezing may be accomplished by applying a spray of ether, by means of an autmatizer, or by a freezing mixture composed of equal parts of pounded ice and salt. Mix quickly, put into a gauze bag and apply it to the parts frozen. From three to six minutes the skin will become white and glistening, then the bag may be removed. Freezing should not be continued longer than six minutes at a ime, as the tissues may be harmed, hough usually no harm results from reeated freezing two or three times. umbago and sciatica, as well as other forms of neuralgia, are sometimes al-most instantly relieved by freezing the skin immediately above the painful part.

A REMARKABLE TREE.—The older readers of the Chimes will perhaps remember a history of coral which was sublished some time ago, the beautiful chapes in which it is found and the part sometimes played in forming islands. loral is formed by the secretions of carbonate of lime obtained by innumerable minute animals called polyps. After it does a certain amount of work it dies and others take its place, and so the onilding of the beautiful structure goes Of these structures none excels in beauty the sertularia rama, a specimen of which is given in the picture. It has the outlines of a forest tree, although it s not more than two feet in height. With a foot-hold on the rock it spreads out its graceful branches, which are covagnity and cheap. HORNED ROOSTERS.

HOW ENGRAFTING MAY BE APPLIED TO

ANIMALS AS WELL AS PLANTS. The article in yesterday's Post concerning a California "horned rooster" created some discussion in scientific and curious circles. A well known resident of Washington, meeting a Post reporter last night, said to him : "That article recalls to mind that more than thirty years ago, when I resided in Winchester Vt., where my father then conducted the Winchester Republican, there also resided an ingenious, intelligent and highly esteemed citizen, a prominent merchast tailor, named Geoge Anlie of the United State navy, and who had in his possession, of his own manufacture, a bona fide living horned rooster, and so far from its being a lustus naturo, it was no more nor less than a home production, and one that any skillful person familiar with grafting trees or plants can produce almost ad, infinitum,

"Are you joking ?" inquired the Post.
"Not a bit of it," was the straighforward reply. "The process is somewhat as follows : Take any healthy fowl of the chicken kind, from five months to one year old, male or female, having a well developed comb; then selecting a young growing rooster, of like condition and age, whose spurs are about an eighth of inch long, or just well and prominently enough developed to show the spur have at hand a suitable keen pen-knife or lancet, then make a proper incision (or slightly scoop out) on the top or on either side of the comb or carbuncle of the fowl, next skillfully detach from another male fowl the bud-like spur, taking along with it a small portion of the fleshy part : quickly insert the bud into the incision or scooped out place on the comb, grease the part with lard or suct without wiping off the blood, carefully, lightly and properly bandage, or cover with a suitable piece of adhesive plaster, in such a way as to prevent the bud being detached by the scratching of the lowl. In due time, say three or foor days, if sufficiently healed, the bandage can be taken off, when in a few months a fully developed and permanently attached spur, or so called horn, will be

"Your explanation is ingenious," said the reporter, "but it certainly sounds

"My explanation shows nothing more or less than the transplanting or grafting process, which modern science has often demonstrated is applicable to the the humae being. And in this connec-tion, it is suggested that a cat or dog, indeed, almost any animal may be ornamented with an engrafted headpiece, and the human forehead divine, or the olfactory appendage be made the garden spot for various elongated attachments. Perhaps after a while some enterprising Yankee will undertake to supply the Barnums and Forepaughs with subjects in natural and artifical history, whose forms and shapes will be limited only by the imagination." - Washington Post.

HUMOR OF ANIMALS,-Who that has kept dogs can deny that they possess a keen sense of humor? Nor are they the only animals who enjoy a joke. The parrot who has succeeded in gripping a careless scientific person by the nose and whiskers will often laugh at the top of his lungs for the next half hour, and show his enjoyment of his innocent joke by standing head downward on his perch, and writhing in the most frantic attitudes. That cats laugh is evident from the familiar proverb in regard to Cheshire cats, which must had origin in something. There was a public cat, or in other words a cat without any private owner-living in a suburban town a few years ago who was full of sarcastic humor. She had frequently been chased in a rude and alarming manner by a lo-cal dog, and naturally had no love for her persecutor. One day the latter was chained up as a punishment for misconduct in connection with a clergyman's eg, and the cat, finding that he could not break his chain, came and sat on the ground just beyond his reach with a broad grin on her face, which must have been to the last degree exasperating to the canine mind. Not content with this the cat went in search of a large tempting bone, which she deposited within two inches of the dog and then sprang up and down, balancing herself on her fore and hind legs, with a display of bilarity which drove the dog frantic There was no possible doubt that the cat was playing a practical joke on her enemy, and she enjoyed it to the utmost possible extent. A dog laughs audibly He opens his mouth as wide as possible and, with his tongue hanging out, utters a sound somewhat resembling a whine and a bark, but differing essentially from either. The expression of the face shows that he is enjoying himself, and bears not the slightest resemblance to the look of pathetic melancholy which always accompanies a genuine whine. But enough has been said to prove that animals have a keen sense of humor.

THE HOWLING MONKEY .- The howling monkeys are the largest found in America, and are celebrated for the loud voices of the males. Often in the great forests of the Amazon and the Orinoco a tremendous noise is heard in the night and early morning, as if a great assemblage of wild beasts were all roaring and screaming together. The noise can be heard for miles and is louder and more piercing than that of any other animal, yet it is produced by a single male howler sitting on the branch of a lofty tree. They are enabled to make this extraordinary noise by means of an organ that is possessed by no other animal The lower jaw is usually deep and this makes room for a hollow boney vesse about the size of a walnut, situated under the root of the tongue and having an opening into the wind pipe by which the animal can force air into it. This increases the power of its voice sounding something like the hollow case of a violin, and producing those marvelous rolling and reverbrating sounds which caused the celebrated traveller, Waterton, to declare that they were such that might have had their origin in the infernal regions. The howlers are large and able-bodied monkeys with bearded faces and very strong and powerful grasping tails. They inhabit the wildest forests; they are very shy, and are seldom taken captive, though they are less attractive than many other American monkeys .-Popular Science Monthly.

CURE FOR ASTHMA .- A lady whose husband had suffered very acutely from asthma and had tried many methods of relief, without advantage, sends the following: "One very hot day when the thermometer stood at one hundred and six degrees, my husband took a very seed. A gentleman sent him word that an old friend of his had been cured by sleeping on a pillow made of 'wild balsam, or, as the Massachusetta people call it, 'life everlasting.' It grows wild in most places in the country and is considered by some an excellent thing for colds-made into tea, of course. had not a particle of faith, but as some grew near by, sent and got it, and as it was not dry enough for a pillow, put it on the floor of his bed room. That night my husband did not have the asthma, ed a miracle so far."
