The Secret

of the universal success of Brown's Iron Bitters is simply this: It is the best Iron preparation ever made; it is compounded of thoroughly scientific, chemical and medicinal principles, and does just what is claimed for it—no more and no less.

By thorough and rapid assimilation with the blood, it reaches every part of the system, healing, purifying and strengthening. Commencing at the foundation it builds up and restores lost health—in no other way can lasting benefit be obtained.

IN THE NEXT.
Gather them close to your loving heart—
Cradle them to your breast;
They will soon enough leave your brooding care,
Soon enough mount youth's topmost stair—
Little ones in the nest.

"REVENGE IS SWEET."

A MOUNTAIN MURDER FROM A POLITICAL QUARREL—
OF NEARLY FIFTY YEARS AGO.
On the evening of September 9, 1830, two men were having a fierce and angry dispute upon the subject of politics in the bar-room of the old hotel in the town of Tunkhannock, Pa.

"Landlord, how much is my bill? I'll take this stage and go to Montrose to-night."
In the hurry of the moment the landlord merely named the amount, took the money and thrust it into his pocket. There was the regulation change of horses, the transfer between the driver and the hostlers, the usual getting out of passengers to "moisten up" at the bar, and the bustle of getting ready to start.

"When he went out on that fatal night I saw my chance. I went out to the front door, unlocked the door, slipped on the stable yard and saw him holding up his lantern at the end of the wagon. I crept swiftly to his back, caught him by the hair, pulled his head back, and with a butcher's short knife I had carried for months, I nearly drove it through his body. All this was done within ten minutes, and I was back again at the front door, looking for the stage and gloating over my revenge.

"From place to place I followed him, seeking an opportunity to reap my revenge and yet escape the punishment of the law. I had so changed by growth of hair and moustache and age, in the ten years that, although he met me frequently, he did not recognize me.

"Afterward Cartwright made the proper affidavit of the truth of his statement. The blood-stained knife, the farwell letter of his wretched wife, left for him when she eloped with Riker, and a letter from the superintendent of the lunatic asylum were found in his valise, and on the day Elliott was to be executed he was released and honorably discharged.

THE PICTORIAL PRAYER BOOK.

BY GEORGE PARKINSON.
It was many a long year ago, and the scene of my story is the office of one of the most respectable notaries in Paris, Monsieur Dubois. He was a man of good sense, probity and benevolence. There were present, besides the notary himself, a lady of middle age, richly dressed; she could never have been handsome, but perhaps had her countenance been less proud or disdainful she would not have appeared so ill—positively ugly; an insignificant looking little man and a woman, very shabbily dressed, who sat some distance from the others, holding the hand of a beautiful little boy.

"Not the slightest; but we shall soon know. Dubois will open it directly."
"Pray, who is that shabby looking woman? What business can she have here?"
"Oh! do you know her? It's the runaway niece, Marie, who made such a disgraceful match some years ago with a lieutenant in the army—a man of low birth."
At that moment Marie approached the speaker; she was scarcely middle age, but sorrow had been beforehand with time in robbing her cheek of its bloom and her eyes of their luster.

two horses. That unexpected sight led them to make inquiry after her, and they found that she had purchased a handsome house, and was living in a quiet but very good style. Thunderstruck at this intelligence, they went together to question the notary. They found him at his desk.
"Do we interrupt you?" said the lady.
"I am not particularly busy; I only making out an account of bank stock I have just bought for Madame Le Fevre."
"And for heaven's sake where does it come from?"
"Why, don't you know?"
"No; how should I?"
"Did you not see what was in the book when she fainting?"
"No."
"Well, then, I must tell you that the prayer-book contained sixty engravings, and each was covered by six bank notes of fifty pounds each."
"Good heavens!" cried the gentleman.
"Oh! if I had but known!" said the lady.

ONCE A KING, NOW A MINER.

At Pueblo, Colorado, there is a man who once reigned as a king. This royal personage came to the State penniless a few months since, and strange to relate, here he met an old companion who was with him when he ruled a kingdom and held dominion over one of the richest little principalities in the world. He is an American by parentage—Col. A. B. Steinberger—and has relatives living here.

THE REASON.

Numerous writers have been heard from upon the question of why boys leave the farm, and the suggestion has been made that one reason is that the rising generation is becoming depraved. This is not the case. They do not leave the dear old farm, where industry and virtue have their eternal abiding place, to mingle with the mad follies of city life. Boys do not desert the quiet homestead, and the fond parents, whose life has been devoted to their children, for the reason that they want to mingle in the worldly whirl of metropolitan life and become slaves in business and immortal society stars.

No farmer boy ever forgot in his successful years the quiet home, the sturdy laborer, the numerous attractions of that old farm, and during the spare moments of his commercial or professional life in a great city there is forever in his heart that picture of contentment and rest, that have secured from the storm-tossed billows of uncertain trade and the snares of an artificial existence.
