ANNIVERSARY ODE.

ST. JACKSON'S DAY.

[The following was written by William B. Conroy, devoted to the memory of the late John Jackson, published in Ebensburg, Cambria county, for a Democratic celebration in honor of Jackson's birthday, held in Philadelphia, January 8, 1838, and which we deem worthy of republication.—Ed. Westmorland Democrat.]

THE KING AND THE THIEF.

There is a fable among the Hindus that a thief, having been detected and condemned to die, sent for his father and told him he had a secret of great importance which he desired to impart to the king, and when that had been done he would be prepared to meet his doom.

Upon receiving this intelligence the king ordered the culprit to be conducted to his presence.

The thief explained that he knew the secret of causing trees to grow which would bear fruit of pure gold.

The king was not to be easily trifled with, and his Majesty would not lose the opportunity, so accompanied by his Prime Minister, his courtiers, and his chief priest, he went with the thief to a spot where there were some trees where the latter performed a series of solemn incantations.

This done, the condemned man produced a piece of gold, and declared that if it should be given to the king, he would produce a tree, every branch of which would bear pure gold.

"But," he added, "this must be put into the ground by a hand that has never been stained by a dishonest act. My hand is not clean, therefore I pass it to my Majesty."

The king took the gold, and the thief departed. Finally, he said, "I remember in my younger days that I have fled from money from my father's treasury which was not mine. I have repented of the sin, but I cannot say my sins are forgiven, and I therefore, to my Prime Minister."

The latter after a brief consultation answered: "It were pity to break the charm through a possible blunder. I receive taxes from the people, and I am obliged to produce a tree, every branch of which would bear pure gold."

"But," he added, "this must be put into the ground by a hand that has never been stained by a dishonest act. My hand is not clean, therefore I pass it to my Majesty."
