FARM NOTES. Sow"carrots early. Painting saves decay. Over-churning is detrimental, Use some gooze-oil on sore teats. Lessen rather than increase the fencing. Cleanliness is half in making good butter. Late sowing of oats will cause a light crop. The Berkshire hogs are unexcelled as are young and growing too fast, as is often ham producers.

Farm animals appreciate the shade tree. Plant some. Profit in gardening is directly related to the manure business. Don't mix wood ashes with manure, but spread them separately.

Choose cloudy days in preference to others for transplanting of all kinds. Evergreen can be safely planted seversl weeks later than deciduous trees.

Pleasure in farming ; driving the work, instead of the letting the work drive you.

Large-growing trees planted at fifty feet from buildings will, in time, protect them from lightning.

The manure question is an important enough one, that every farmer should experiment with different kinds of fertilizers.

The Norway spruce planted at two feet apart will with one clipping each year make a perfect and beautiful hedge for the farm.

Don't allow the lantern to be lit in the barn. Even if it goes out, better the barn. Even if it goes out, better grope the way to a light place, than run risks of a fire. These are important points, to insist upon having the boys help observe.

Watch the seed buds of cabbage, turnips, and other brassicas, and as soon, as the leaves show, dust with any substance like soot, wood ashes, or air stacked lime to kill the black flea. A "atitch in time" here will save the ocratic Principles, but not Controlled by crop.
