A case of malpractice occurred at Indiana on Thursday last. A widow named Subort had been under the care of James M. White, who claimed to be a physician, but who was for many years a blacksmith, and who has no diploma. On Thursday afternoon a son of the widow called upon Drs. Thomas St. Clair & Son, who visited the sick woman and found her dying from an overdose of morphine. White was present, and when Dr. St. Clair told the friends assembled that the patient was dying, White said she had threatened to kill herself. She died about o'clock in the evening, and an inquest was held on Saturday. A post mortem was held by Drs. St. Clair & Son, when other evidences of malpractice were discovered. THREE WEEKS DOWN SOUTH. "Traveler" Describes His Trip to the Mammoth Cave Nothing more readily induces a contrast between the Northern and the Southern States than a comparison of the Falls of Niagara with the Mammoth Cave. They are both in their way, admittedly, the greatest natural curlosities in the United States, -or. indeed, in the known world. And it is not easy to say which is the greater wonder, Niprofound mysteries :- The former in all its sublime attributes is palpable and taken in byrinths requiring weeks of exploration.

Yet Nugara is surrounded by a net work of railroads-the river spanned by suspenslop bridges -a thriving young city growing . up in its immediate neighborhood-palatial hotels and summer resorts abound-in short it is the Mecca of the Northern States; and an sdult don't like to admit that he has never visited Niagara. Nay, were now the Em- 5 25@6 60; tially located has initiated the means for making the falls with all their surroundings and vicinity a public park-free to all !

Behold the difference! The Mammoth Cave is situate in Edmondson county, Ky., near its eastern boundary. The counties into which the Southern States are divided, are much smaller than in the North, Edmonson is a small county-a corn and tobacco county-of some 5,000 inhabitants,its county seat Brownsville, with some 250 inhabitants, some 11 miles from the Cave.

Traveling by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, after crossing Green River a few miles above, we arrived at "Cave City," at about 3 p. m. The city consists of four houses, one of which was our rendezvous From this point the fare is two dollars to the cave and return; the distance some nine miles, passing through the counties of Bar-ren, Hart, and Edmondson. The land is rolling and in its appearance resembled the country in Western Pennsylvania; as it did also in the character and growth of its timber. Comparatively little of the land was cultivated, and even that was wretchedly great value: The road was the worst 1 ever travelled.

Where it was not steep and rocky it was a swamp and the drivers took through the open woods. At one point on our return the teams were all abreast or nearly so, inthe woods, each trying to head the others into the main road :- the passengers, ladies and all cheering their respective drivers. All this too on Sunday morning. A pleasant young Methodist clergyman was of the party, and he could not resist the good natured rivalry. We met him frequently afterwards and always found him pleasant while his whole demeanor was always in conformity to his sacred calling. He took down in his tablet the names and additions of the whole party. The drive became wearying. Our African

John had destroyed three saplings on his team and had cut a fourth. I sat in front with him and sought information; but he was the most stupid negro I ever met. At length I saked him, "Are we ne near the cave yet?" His answer was, "Wen we get past the hill t'other side of the other one, de boss will meet us and tote our plunder in."

We reached the "House" about five p. m. and soon after had a plain country supper. There were 27 at table-all candidates for the Cave. The building is a queer, antiquelooking structure: a temperance house, there being no licenses granted in Edmondson county. We had two waiters at our table-one a youth of some twenty, (white,) and not less than seven feet high-the other older but about the same altitude. I may say here of the house, that though homely it was clean and comfortable-the landlord polite and fairly intelligent, and the charges not too high.

The descent luto the cave was, as it uniformly is, at seven o'clock and the agent occupied his office preparing and issuing tickets. He issued none for the "long route" as that route is impracticable after the spring rains. But there is a "short route" and la 'shorter," for which tickets were respectively three and two dollars. We took the latter as it corresponded with our ability to travel, as well as our finances.

Then there was a flutter of preparation. Our number was 27, one-third ladies. Highway Robbery at East Conemangh Two young men, 'residents of this city, who had been in attendance at a dance in Custer's Hall, Franklin borough, were handled pretty roughly on the Pennsylvania railroad, opposite the high bluff, on Saturday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock. After leaving the ball they crossed the railroad to Confer's saloon, where they drank some Soon after taking their departure from the saloon two men called to them, saying: "Hold on, we are going to town, too." The strangers walked along with the young men, chatting pleasantly, until reaching the binff. At that point one of the strangers, without saying a word, struck one of the young men a stunning blow, feiling him to the ground. The other young man was then thrown down and every pocket in his clothing rifled. His companion was similarly searched, and the strangers then made off. The only plunder of any value obtained by the robbers was an open-faced silver watch, worth about $25. The robbers are supposed to have been tramps, and there is no cine as to their identity. - Johnstonen Take Notice!
