

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The Blair county Republicans will hold their primary election on Saturday, June 20th, and will hold the convention on the Tuesday following, when they will nominate candidates for the offices of Prothonotary, Sheriff, Poor Director and Jury Commissioner. They have adopted the increased delegate system and abandoned the Crawford system.

There were most abandoned females in attendance at Court during the present week, than were ever known to be in the town at one time before. As none of the hotels would keep them, they were compelled to sleep in the streets during the night until they were taken to jail, and in the morning were fined $2.00, to which they had to pay before getting out.

On Friday last a Polish woman who was on her way from Houtzdale to Pittsburgh, stopped off at Tyrone and hurriedly proceeded to a place near there, where in a few minutes she gave birth to a child. Things were made as comfortable as possible for the mother and child, and the next morning she walked to the station through a heavy rain and took the cars for Pittsburgh.

A job of running on Thursday of last week, a horse and carriage were hired from the Messrs. O'Hara, of this place, hitched to the station at Crescon and took the train for Johnstown. In consequence of the accident on the branch that afternoon, the gentleman after the horse did not get there at the time expected, and the horse finally scolding at the cars broke loose and ran away, badly wrecking the buggy.

There is every indication that the coming summer season will find our town full of summer visitors who will spend the summer here for the health and recreation. Boarding house keepers and everybody who knows that there are always a few who are interested in the health of the town, call to mind that they can always find at John Owens' store on High Street, dry goods, dress goods, boots and shoes, groceries, provisions, and all kinds of canned goods, at the lowest prices.

Attention is called to the fact that Elisha L. Davis' boot and shoe store in this place is stocked full of men's and boy's boots and shoes, ladies, misses and children's shoes of every description, all of the latest styles, and at which he is selling at the lowest prices. THREE WEEKS DOWN SOUTH.
"Traveler" Describes the Wonderful Mammoth Cave.

The opening to the Cave is northward. The descent is difficult, the pathway being narrow and somewhat dangerous. Besides these several guides—but two principal ones, both intelligent colored men. One of them was supplied with fuses that cast a brilliant light on each apartment as we entered, and made a short speech descriptive of the place.

But our especial escort was William Garvin, a middle-aged, well informed negro who has been a scribbler these more than a score of years. He explained every thing to us as we accompanied him—and we found him to be very intelligent. He had the manners of a sage and the simplicity of a child.

The descent was some fifty feet, the atmosphere a little cooler than above ground, but decidedly pleasant. At some twenty feet distance we came to an iron gate which was locked to prevent trespassing. Here we entered the Rotunda.

I had expected the inside of the cave to be moist and clammy—but it was dry and salubrious. There a small rivulet trickled down at the entrance and disappeared among the rocks; and a little crystal spring called "Wandering Willie's Spring," appears and disappears in one of the apartments, yet the pathway on which you tread is dry and firm, and it is difficult to imagine its purity from the walls or ceiling. This is true of every part of the cave I visited.

The Rotunda is a spacious hall its ceiling apparently some fifty feet high, and some 300 feet in diameter. It is crossing your eyes around it, it is difficult to imagine its purity from the walls or ceiling. This is true of every part of the cave I visited.
