DIDN'T SHOOT.

The Johnstown Tribune, In Its issue of Monday last, says: An accident of a rather sensational nature happened at a gives the different states and counties and house on Adam street last night. Efforts even towns, does not inform you that there have been made to keep the matter from the public, but the particulars are gradually leaking out. you.

As far as can be learned, the circumstances of the affair are as follows: Mr. George Wolford, son of Mr. Edward Wolford, has for some time been keeping company with a Miss Luther, whose home is on The young man is not of age yet, and, it is said, on that account and for other reasons the father was opposed to his going with the girl. He expressed his determination o the young man to force him to desist keeping Miss Luther's company, but that did not deter him in the least.

Last evening George called to see his lady friend, as usual on Sunday evening. He had been at the house but a short time when nis father put in appearance and, in an enraged manner, ordered him to leave. The son did not obey, whereupon, it is alleged, Wotford drew a revolver, and, placing it to his sou's head, told him he would shoot him dead on the spot if he did not go upon his knees and promise to quit the girl's company. The young man, no doubt, regarding discretion as the better part of valor, assumed a prayerful attitude and passed his word that all communication between him and his fair friend should cease. Father and son then left the Luther premises together. This is the story as it runs current among those who have heard of the affair.

Miss Luther, when asked for a statement in regard to the trouble, declined to say anything. "I will not make any statement," she said, "unless I am forced to. In that event I will tell some things that will not be very pleasant for Mr. Wolford to hear, nor very credfable to him. Occasionally they have a harr line of other routes, but they are made to appear very insignificant, narrow gage roads. Well, we were shuffled off the cars and directed to take what they called a "mixed" train to the city of Pensacola. And it was badly mixed. It was really a freight train with one passsenger car attached. They stopped at every little station to load and unload freight, and we were nearly five hours going 44 miles.
