THE GRANGER OF A CAR.

AN EPISODE OF THE PACIFIC.

Why the Conductor Never Lets One of the Countrymen Forget His Wife—Winning the Silver Dollar, Etc.

It is a tall, lank, weary-looking granger, stepped into a "third street car" yesterday, followed by a woman as lank and weary-looking as himself. There could be no mistake about their relationship, for her hand and wife. But they exchanged no word, the woman peering curiously at the window and the man cranking his finger-tips with remarkable success, for each explosion was almost as loud as a pistol shot. At Clay and Montgomery the man got up and walked to the rear platform. "The wife, not nothing him, kept starting out the window. The granger put his forefinger between his lips and gave a loud, shrill whistle, which made the portly conductor jump as if a bullet had struck him. The woman got up briskly and followed her husband, who walked along the street, still grim and taciturn.

AMONG MOONSHINERS.

ILLINOIS DISTILLING BUSINESS.

A Visit to Their Moon-shine Homes—Their Lawless, Squidid, and Immoral Life Described.

Imagine a tall, thin, bony, pointed nose, standing a foot or more in his stockings, with long, heavy, tangled hair, black as jet, falling over his low, forehead, a mass of muscles that stand out like a grizzly bear's, and a pair of eyes that are as bright as the stars in the sky. This is a typical moonshiner of the extreme North Carolina "moonshine" as he is called. His head is covered with a grizzly mane of hair, and his eyes are as bright as the stars in the sky. He is a tall, thin, bony, pointed nose, standing a foot or more in his stockings, with long, heavy, tangled hair, black as jet, falling over his low, forehead, a mass of muscles that stand out like a grizzly bear's, and a pair of eyes that are as bright as the stars in the sky.

THE PORTRAIT.

In a small but handsomely-furnished sitting-room in a hotel in New York, a young lady was sitting in an easy-chair, reading a book. A young man entered the room, and she looked up at him with a smile. "What news have you brought?" she asked. "I have brought you a portrait of your father," he said. "It is a very fine portrait, and I think you will like it." She looked at the portrait with a smile. "It is a very fine portrait, and I think you will like it," she said. "It is a very fine portrait, and I think you will like it," she said.

THE BEAR AND THE WOLF.

The bear and the wolf had been warm friends for many years when the wolf one day asked for a loan to help him out of a tight corner. To his utter astonishment the bear refused to lend him a penny. "I haven't a penny to spare," said the bear. "I haven't a penny to spare," said the bear.

FOR SMOKERS.

Employees on the passenger trains of the L. & N. R. Co. are beginning to smoke. They are beginning to smoke. They are beginning to smoke. They are beginning to smoke.
