No sooner are the small spring grains, barly and oats, harvested than it is time to commence preparations for fall seeding. No sooner, after the barly has been hauled from the field, plowing the stubble is commenced, the better; and the same is true of outs, provided - wheat is to follow those crops.

av It a a little unfortunate that the preparation of seed-beds for wheat must commence in the hottest and unusually the driest time of the year, when teams must suffer most from heat and flies and the ground is so dry that it is very difficult plowing it the proper depth, and when it is very likely to break into hard lumps. But there seems to be no alternative. If the stubble is left until near seeding time it may be still harder and insufficient time is left to complete the proper comminution and compaction of the soil before seeding.

If proper preparation of the ground was made for spring seeding it will be less difficult preparing it for wheat. If the ground, when well dried out, was plowed deep and finely pulverized it will neither be so hard nor so lumpy as if plowed while too wet, plowed shallow and left in clods. Slovenly, negligent preparation for one crop increases the labor of preparation for subsequent crops. No farmer can afford to slight the preparation for any crop, for the crop slighted will fail to pay the cost of indifferent culture and the cost of following crops is increased. If a farmer cannot properly prepare the ground for the seasonable sowing nor planting of one crop, he had better omit the crop entirely and let the ground lie in fallow until it is time to prepare for the next crop.

If the ground was plowed deep for barley or oats, it will not be necessary to plow the stubble very deep; because it has been decided by the best practical farmers, from long experience, that it is not best to make the lower soil mellow for seed-bed for wheat, but if the upper two or three inches is fine and mellow it is better to have that below pretty firmly compacted. It is best to have the wheat roots collect their food near the surface in autumn. A mass of fine roots, near the surface will rise and fall with the exparsion and contraction of the soil in freezing and thawing, without being hoven out upon the surface, whereas, if the wheat roots deep in autumn, the roots will be broken off by the expansion and the crowns will die. And here, we think, may be found an explanation of the wonderful 'effects of phosphates, some seasons, in preventing whiter-killing. The phosphate, drilled in with the seed, course the growth of a mat of roots near the surface.

In view of these considerations, the stubble should be turned under as soon as possible after the narvest is gathered. and then time will be afforded to compact the lower strata of the soil and pulverize the upper, by means of roller harrow, gang-plow, cultivator, &c., before seeding time arrives.

In regard to the area it will be advisable for farmers to sow to wheat, this fall, we would say that we think they had better sow that which comes in the regular rotation, provided it can be well prepared. Wheat has not paid very well for the last two or three years. nor have other crops as for that, bu next year may bring a change. We do not believe it best to abandon any staple crop because it has not done well for two or three years, unless conditions have so changed that there is little probability of its paying in the future. prepare the seed-bed well, sow in season, good, plump, clean wheat of the most profitable varieties; sow with phosphates if experience has shown that they will pay on your soil, or top-dress with fine barnyard manure; do the best you possibly can, and await patiently the action of Nature's forces to accomplish the remainder. - Rural Home.

Woman the Home Maker. "Home," says the proverb, "is where to have heart enough to fit out a home without a woman to help him. A woman can do so for herself; there lies her advantage. It may be harder for a woman to make money : uudoubtedly it i s harder. She makes a dollar, perhaps, nance of a home. So long as she retains it she is strong and self-respecting, and even if she parts with it, so strong is the instinct of home that she can sometimes reconstruct it for herself, even in a boarding house. If the home is combined with a little freedom in the use of money, it gives more comfort and more local prestige than a lone man can win by a fortune. What would be the condition of any country village in our Atlantic States without a first-class maiden lady! She is the daughter of "old squire" sombody or "parson" somebody else; she lives in the great square house, with its elms and its white lilacs and its breezy ball; she has a maid or two who have lived with her so long that they seem like half sisters; she has in daily use the precious china and the old chairs that her envious city niece she manages the book club and the church sociable, the land the sociable the land the land the sociable the land church sociable; she is the confidante of all the love affairs; she calls upon the new comers, if worthy-indeed the new comers, if worthy, bring letters to her. To the older inhabitants of the town she always seems young and even of precedence that outlasts youth and beauty; if she has a sister, they are known to the end of their days as "the Parker girls," All this is the joint result of womanhood which creates homes. It is not only potent for itself, but it extends its potency over all other homes. What compared with this is the social position given by wealth to the lonely old bachelor in the country village ? Though he be a millionaire, he is simas people grow older it is the man who becomes dependent, and the woman the centre and essential figure of the household, since she can do without him and he cannot do without her. The proof of this lies in the fact that we see all around us self-sufficing and contented households of women, while a house
