PORTAGE, Jan. 5, 1886. EDITOR FREEMAN -Trusting that a few lines from this quarter will be of interest to many readers, the writer pens the following : On the evening of New Year's day Patrick Moran, aged about seventeen years, who for a number of years had been staying with the family of the late Patrick Reilly, near Portage, attended a reverie at the Cambria House, Wilmore, and, it is said, became slightly intoxicated. Where he obtained the means by which his mental powers were thus dethroned is not known to the writer, but the probability is that some readers of the Freeman could conjecture with a very considerable degree of certainty. At what time young Moran left for home is a mystery. It is known, however, that he was at the party as late as eleven o'clock New Year's night. The next morning, between the hours of ten and eleven, he was found lying Mr. John McGovern's house, Wilmore, in an insensible and very much mutilated conviate his sufferings and restore sensibility, but all to no purpose. of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languar, and wearness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital forces. To regain health, Nature must be a the total or a fewer that the total organises. aided by a thorough blood-purifying med-icine; and nothing else is so effective as
