TWENTIETH VOLUME.

The FREEMAN with the present number commences a new volume, and enters upon its twentieth year. We would like to make a number of improvements that are badly needed in and about our office, and if onehalf of our subscribers who are in arrears would pay up we could make these improvements without any trouble. The amounts are small and could be paid without any effort on the part of subscribers, and when gathered together by several hundreds would make a large item to us. We don't like to be dunning them every week, for, unfortunately, the dunning items are not relished by those who pay, while those who lo not, we imagine, can hardly be induced to pay without some stronger argument years' subscription is all that is due us at most by anyone, anything previous to that time being due Mr. H. A. McPike, and with which we have nothing to do; and old subscribers will be perfectly safe in offering to pay eight or ten years' back subscription, as we will only receive for two years back and one year in advance, which we will make to those settling inside of tie next two months for four dollars and fifty cents. Call early in order to avoid the crush at the end of the next two months.

LOBETTO LOCAL INSTITUTE. ance on Saturday Last.

Once on a time I viewed a platured scene
Of quiet rural life 'mid living green;
A farm house stood at the foot of rising full.
And through the mendow flowed a crystal rill;
The sober cattle grared in neighboring field.
At tranquil eve full flowing pail to yield;
Two giant oxen from a straw stack fed.
A sleek team in the stable, munching, stood—
For it was morning of the Sacred Day.
Which blessed all Nature with its kindly ray;
Fair rounding billows of arboreal wealth
Enclosed this happy bome of pence and health.
Sweetrier, rose bush, and the scented herb,
Effused sweet incense on the measy curb;
An oaken bucket rested high in air.
The bending sweep its tapering length did rear;
The bending sweep its tapering length did rear;
The birds were twittering in a poplar tree,
Or flew above the elms in jeyous glee;
The fleecy flocks were feeding o'er the hill.
The jay and crow the wood with cawe did fill;
A scene of beauty, peace and quiet joy,
Which might the pen of angels well employ;
No fairer on this whirling globe might be,
Wrenthed in its fleecy clouds, in ether free;
Bounding along its Heaven directed ceurse,
With jearful speed and Arch-seraphic force !
But this digression! we the thread resume;
One point fell on the sense mateproper
Like jarring note of discord from the bow;
Two youths were in the barn yard feeding stock.
Whose clothing gave the perfect scene a shock,
For stiff and starched with collere, offs and pins,
Each vouth to feed the lowing stock begins!
Twas "out of killer," as the painters say.
To see those foppish youths a feeding hay!
No artist e'er depicted rural scene
With figures in such foppish clother, I ween! The Institute was organized by electing Mr. J. C. Scanian chairman and Miss Mattie Denny secretary Denny secretary.

The first topic on the progam, 'Best Methods of Teaching Reading,' was opened by Mr. A. J. Sanker, a teacher of Washington township.
