Up to last Tuesday evening the Republican Congressional conference of nary steps to wake up the people and get this district, which re-assembled at Somerset on Wednesday of last week, had not succeeded in making a nomination. If its members can't agree upon a candidate they had better abdicate their power and request the Republican State Committee to complete the job for them. They have a late precedent for adopting this course in the action of the Republican conference in the Crawford, Mercer and Butler district. Cooper's committee can dispose of the wrangle in less than an hour, but as at least three of the candidates have, or ought to have, a very decided impression in regard to what the State committee would do, they will be certain to repudiate any proposition of that kind if it should be offered in the conference,
