A NEW French ministry has been formed and General Boulanger's place as Minister of War, has been filled by General Saussiere. It was claimed that the continuance of Boulanger as Minister of War was a constant menace to Germany, and his plan of military orgapization too expensive to the country. He is without doubt, to-day, the most popular man in France, and it is thought that his displacement will be only temporary, and that he will come back to power before long. He has asked for a furlough on "account of ill health," which if refused will make him the object of the army's sympathy, and if granted, will make the people believe that the new ministry are too anxious to get rid of him.
