> Among the Republican politicians who were gathered in New York to bid to put it into. good by to Mr. Blaine the same disposition to drag a question of foreign politics into the party conflicts of this country betrayed itself. At a meeting of the Republican Club of New York, held on the Jay of Mr. Blaine's departure, this Irish question obtruded itself in a report from the Committee on "National Affairs," which, judging from the contents of that report, should have been styled the Committee on "International Affairs." This document, in guarded language, mentioned the Blaine Democratic organizations which gave substantial support to the national ticket in 1884," and stated that these organizations still remain in existence, "undismayed by the Republican party's defeat." In the discussion of the report (which was adopted with only one dissenting vote) a speaker said that the committee had conferred with the leading Irish organizations, and that they all wanted the Maine statesman, as he was the only man who had ever been able to draw their enemy's fire

But what legitimate relation can such a question bear to the issues which the people of this country must solve in their own Government? The great majority of the American people, without regard to party or creed, profoundly sympathize with the Irish in the momentous struggle upon which they have entered, and the "Irish question" can be dragged into our politics only by violence. If there should be in this country a party organization hostile to the Irish in their struggle, and in sympathy with the coercion policy of England, an Irish question would necessarily arise in American politics; but there is no such party in the country, and hence the obtrusion of such a question may be regarded as an Irish bull of colossal

Governor Morton pointed out that it was not possible in the nature of things the inferior race could maintain its ascendancy. The pyramid of popular government could not be made o rest on apex of ignorance and superstition, while property and intelligence, guided by American brains and courage, constituted its base.

The Republicans have been a long time learning the lesson predicted by some of their ablest leaders. Senator Ingalis' confession, however, is to the point. "Negro suffrage," he says, "has proven an absolute and unqualified failure." It certainly has in the sense the senator expected to garner its fruits. The negroes will never again vote as they did in the days the senator was jubilant over their voting power; and all intelligent and candid persons concede the government and the people are -A few days ago a tortoise was found on the farm of Mr. Henry M. Kepler, near Middletown, Mo., which had the initials "C. S. " and the date "1761" cut on the shell. This find caused Mr. Kepler to look up his old deeds, and among them he found one, dated 1756, conveying the farm to one Casper Shoar, and he is now satsfied that the initials on the shell of the tortoise are those of this former owner of the farm. How old it was when thus marked-126 years ago-cannot be known. The tortoise was again set at liberty by Mr. Kepler, and in a few hours thereafter had disappeared.
