Dr. McGlyen's Excommunication.

The decree of excommunication against Dr. McGlynn has at last been pronounced, and he is outside the communion of the Catholic Church, As the decree itself shows, this is wholly a matter of church dis.pline. No reference is made in the deree to the economical doctrines which Dr. McGlynn advocates. He contumaciously refused to present himself in Rome to be heard in his own behalf after two orders had been made upon him, and he has been disiplined for disobedience. Every church establishment, from the highest to the lowest, and all social organizations have rules and regulations for their government. The penalty for persistent disobedience of these rules is absolute exclusion from participation in the rites, privileges and benefits of the associaon. Dr. McGlynn's contumacy made exactions of my public duties I felt to his excommunication necessary for disibe so uncertain, however, that when first confronted by the delegation of was whether the Church should submit was whether the Church should submit to a contemptuous disobedience of its orders or whether the offending pries: should be punished. This statement is feeting the interests of the American people concerns them and him alone. The power of the Church can touch him no further.

Sympathy for the fate of Dr McGlynn is entirely wasted. He had himself deliberately invited the act that severed him from the church, and he is, doubtless, prepare to accept all the consequences. The doctrines in regard to the rights of property which he has espoused, and on which he has staked his standing as a priest, will be adjudged before the bar of public opinion-a tribunal whose judgments, in this country at least, are more potential than any decrees which ecclesiastical authority can pronounce. In stepping out of the church as he has done (for the decree of excommunication inexorably followed his own act) he has carried his cause before the court of public opinion stripped citizen.-Philadelphia Record.

The New Gettysburg Victory.

The result of the war of the rebellion sisubstantial and priceless. In addition to the supereminent boon of freedom for ernment than ever, has destroyed secdrawn closer the bonds of union between the people of the North and the South. But the memory of the war is now only a sentiment. When ex Confederates grow warm over their convivial meetengs they may occasionally talk of the Lost Cause." When mousing politicians desire to "fire the Northern heart" they may rant and rave about "unreconstructed rebels." But where the influence of the soldier who survived the war and the honest feeling of the masses come into play, nothing is heard but expressions of generous sympathy between the victors and the vanquished, and of respect for the sincerity and

L. L., has just received a check for $200 from Mr. P. H. Cassidy, auditor of the New York, Wood Haven and Rockaway railroad, under somewhat peculiar circumstances. Hoey sent in a bill for expenditures-ice cream, buggy rides, dinners, etc.-during his courtship of Miss Margaret Semars, an accomplished young lady, who has just been married to Mr. Cassidy. Hoey intended forbidding the marriage and talked of a breach of promise suit against the young lady, but being advised that he had no legal ting is to be weatherboarded with good dry Hemmentioned and sent it to her on the day of her wedding. As soon as Mr. Cassidy heard of the matter be sent his check for the amount, which Hoey has accepted as a slight balm for his lost love, but says he would prefer the girl.
