Medicinal Value of Lemons,

"While you are giving people simple rules for preserving their health, why don't you tell them about the use of lemons?" an intelligent professional man asked me the other day. He went on to say that he had long been troubled with an inactive liver, which caused him a world of pain and trouble, until take a glass of hot water with the juice of half a lemon squeezed into it, but no sugar night and squeezed into it, but no sugar, night and morning, and see what the effect would be. He tried it, and found himself better almost immediately. His daily headaches, which medicine had failed to cure, left him; his appetite improved, and he gained several pounds in weight within a few weeks. After a while he omitted the drink, either at night or in the morning, and now at times does without either of girls. them. "I am satisfied from experiment," said he, "that there is no better medicine for persons who are troubled with bilious and liver complaints than the simple remedy I have given, which is far more efficacious than quipine or any other drug, while it is devoted of their injurious consequences. It excites the liver, stimulates the digestive organs and tones up the system generally. It is not unpleasant to take, either; indeed, one soon gets to liking it,"

The Grigin of Cheap Postage.

The story of how cheap postage originated has been often told. Fifty-one mars ago, shortly before the con victoria came to the English throne, a traveller in the north of England stopped to rest at country tavern. While sitting on a bench before the door the village letter-carrier came up with a letter for the landlady. She took It, looked at it a few moments attentively, asked the postage, which was two shillings, and then handed it back to the carrier, remarking that she could not afford to pay all that postage. The gentleman on hearing her say this insisted on paying for the letter, which she was very unwilling he should do, and when the lettercarrier had departed she owned to him that there was nothing inside the letter. She and her brother lived far apart, both were too poor to pay heavy postage, and they had arranged a plan by which, by means of certain marks on the addresses of their letters, each could once in six months ascertain that the other was in good health and doing well, The traveller was a member of Paritament, Mr. Rowland Hill, who a few weeks later introduced his plan for cheap postage into the house of Com-

A FAMOUS ELEPHANT KILLED .-Bijou, a famous elephant that has been before the American public for sixty years, was killed by poison the other day at the World's Museum, Boston, where it has been suffering from old age and disease. Poison had been prepared in capsuls, which were concealed in chocolate caramels. Dr. Al. Watts offered one to the great beast as it lay upon its side. Bijou took it with great deliberation, swallowing it, and looked up for more. All that had been prepared were given, and then the result was awaited. The poison used was the same Dr. Walts uses in dispatching homeless dogs. It did its work thoroughly. Just fortyfive minutes after the first bit of candy had been placed in his mouth Bijou was dead. For a few minutes there had been convulsive workings of the legs and body, the great head was partially lifted from the ground, and then fell back; the eyes became fixed, and, without another tremor, B jou passed

Make the Farm Home Pleasant.

Yes; make it so pleasant that the growing boys and girls will no be looking forward to the time when they will be old enough to leave. the farm in search of a pleasanter place. We know a well to-do tarmer, having eight children, who, as soon as they are old enough to support themselves, leave their home. Of the five boys, not one remains on the farm. They have gone to clerkships and other positions, in preference to staying on the much despised farm. A glance in the home may account somewhat for this. There has never been any effort to make it attractive for the children. The parents' aim has been to work and save, with scarcely a thought that their children had any other needs than food and clothing. They are active, brightminded boys and girls. It is no wonder that the dullness and monotony becomes unendurable.

This farmer does not hesitate to spend money in farm improvements, in fine stock, or in anything that will advance his financial interest; but any outlay for the children's pleasure is regarded as unnecessary and extravagant.

Children cannot feel that sense of proprietorship in the farm and its profits that is a stimulant to the heads of the household, and something is needed to take its place. Some personal property, even if a chicken or a pig, is a strong incentive. Children are sportive by nature-all young animals are-and some diversion is essential for leisure hours; otherwise their minds will wander off and dwell on the attractions supposed to pertain to village and city

A few dollars each year invested in reading matter will not only supply pleasant employment for leisure hours, but the means of mental improvement as well. There are so many excellent, entertaining publications for the young, and at such low prices, that no family in which there are children should be without one or more. But parents should discriminate carefully between a good and a bad class of reading matter, for there is a large amount of flashy, sensational character, wholly unfit for the young to read.

There is no reason why a country hame should not be a place of pleasure and contentment to every member. There is a freshness and freedom in farm life that cannot be enjoyed when a person is surrounded by brick walls, With pleasant mental recreation for leisure hours there need be no nnhappy memories of the farm to carry through

An Age of Paper.

The paper bottle is the latest evidence that we live in an age of paper. Car wheels, barrels, washbowls, and racing boats are now made from paper, or a substance that can only be so named, though it is rather a papier mache than a texture that has been produced by the complicated appliances of a paper mill. The paper bottle is the invention of a manufacturer of ink and bluing at Chicago. It has the advantages over the glass bottle : Less likely to break ; much lighter weight : inpenetrability to frost ; lower cost; no packing material needed in cases, if properly prepared. The only advantage possessed by the glass bottle is transparency. A decided preference for the paper bottle is predicted by the American grocer. And syeaking of bottles, why is it that the cylender shape is so largely in fashion? An immense saving of room, and consequently in cost of carriage, would be effected, were square bottles used, and the same might be said of cans, in which articles of food or for other purposes are packed. The square can has made great gains in favor of packers within a few years, but the cy!- TIN, COPPER AND SHEET-IRON WAR inder is still largely used.

Manufacture of Hairpins.

For years the English and French controlled the manufacture of hairpins, and it is only within the last twenty years that the goods have been produced in this country to any extent. The machinery used is of a deticate and intricate character, as the prices at which pins are sold necessitate the most rapid and cheapest process, which can only be procured by automatic machines. The wire is made expressly for the purpose and put up in large coils, which are placed in a clamp, which carries it to the machine while straightening it: from there it runs into another machine, which cuts, bends, and, by a delicate and instantaneous process, sharpens the points. Running at full speed these machines will turn out 120 hairpins per minute. To economize, it is necessary to keep them working night and day. The difficult part is the enameling, which is done by dipping in a prepararation and baking in an oven. Here is where the most constant careful attention is required, as the pin must be perfecily smooth and the enamel have a perfect polish. The slightest particles of dust cause imperfections and roughness, which is objectionable.

A LOVE STORY IN A SCORE OR SO OF LINES.-From the German is taken the beautiful story of the ivy's origin. A Rhine maiden, somewhat of a coquette, promised to give her hand to a noble young man, "but not yet" she said "give me freedom a little longer." Weeks passed, and the youth becoming jealous of her smiles, urged her to name the day when she would make him forever happy; but with a merry laugh and and a twinkling eye she bade him "wait" Repeatedly he came to her. At last he said: "If still thou tellest me to wait it will be forever." Thinking he only told her this to frighten her, with a toss of her pretty head, she replied: "Then wait forever, kind sir." With one long, sad gaze on her sweet face he left her. He went away to the holy war, and she pined and died. One day a strange plant sprang up on her grave. It put forth its tender leaves and long slender fingers, ever moving onward. It covered the grave, then moved on over the ground. The superstitions villagers watched it with wonder, and they whispered to one another that this strange vine was the maiden Ivy's soul going forth to find her lover.

A Dog's Sacrafice.

The barn of George Suring, near Greenville, caught fire recently and burned to the ground. In the barn, hitched to his manger by a halter, was a horse. In all its drives and even in the stall was a mongrel cur which had been called Jack. The flames spread so rapidly that it was impossible to get the horse and other contents out of the burning barn. Jack was lying alongside his friend, the horse, and refused to leave, but remained beside the perishing animal barking franticly for assistance until the devouring flames stilled his faithful voice and poor Jack died a martyr to his devotion. The horse was haltered and could not escape, but the door of the building having been burst open, every effort was made to call and persuade the dog to to flee from the peril. Jack, however, would only run back and forth from the neighing horse, pitifully whining and barking as if entreating aid for its endangered friend.

THE men who sold or gave away their sheep three or four years ago, because there was more money in cattle or hogs, are now realizing the error of rushing out of, or into, a business with every little shade or turn in affairs, thin, and in the end you will always come out ahead.

A cow that is well fed, in order to bring her to yield as much as her capacity will permit, gives profit not only in milk and butter, but the value of her manure is greater than that from a cow which has been neglected. The average estimate of the value of the manure from a here of well-fed oows is $10 per annum,

Is Life Worth Living?

That depends upon the Liver, for if the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order-the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirits are depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Billoueness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured.
